DETENTION HOME LACK GIVEN AS REASON

More Juveniles Face Jail Terms

By PETER McNELLY

The provincial attorney-general's department Thursday told the Family and Children's Service it will raise more juvenile cases to adult court because of the lack of juvenile delinquent care facilities here.

The result will be that more sentences for juvenile offences will be served in adult jails and prisons.

The Family and Children's Service was advised of the policy change in a letter from the attorney-general's office.

The attorney-general's department has the authority to raise juvenile cases to adult court under the federal Juvenile Delinquent Act.

Under current provincial legislation, young people aged 12 to 19 found guilty in juvenile court here are sentenced into the care of the Family and Children's Service, placed on probation or fined.

In 1968, amendments to the provincial Protection of Children Act gave responsibility for developing juvenile delinquent treatment facilities to children's aid societies where they exist. In Victoria, this is the F and CS. There are two other children's aid societies in Vancouver.

Social Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi said this morning the province has adequate juvenile delinquent treatment facilities and is developing more.

"We have a cabinet committee working on this problem all the time," he said. "I don't understand what the attorney-general's department is talking about."

Gaglardi said there is no place in the world which has facilities to handle certain kinds of young offenders. He said the attorney-general's department may have made the decision in an attempt to provide facilities for what he called "certain types of erring individuals."

He did not elaborate on the meaning of his term. Gaglardi said his department is continuing plans for construction of a young offenders unit in Sooke to complement existing treatment programs.

When told of the attorney-general's department intention to refer more juvenile cases to adult court, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said, "this is an unbelievable admission of their own inadequacy."

Barrett, who is also a social worker, said the provincial government first avoided direct responsibility for the care of juveniles when it passed the 1968 amendments permitting the private agencies to develop programs to supervise and rehabilitate young offenders.

WRIGHT . . . condemns move

F and CS Executive Director Gordon Wright condemned the attorney-general's department decision as "a thoroughly destructive undertaking."

Wright said moving more juvenile cases to adult court will only result in more juveniles going to jail. "That any adolescent at any point should have to be imprisoned suggests a failure of society's resources," he said.

He said it does no good to take juvenile delinquents outside the community and put them in what he termed prison's "fake society."

The F and CS is planning to enlarge its treatment facilities by setting up special group homes for delinquents in Greater Victoria. The first will open in the next six months and three more will be established during the next 18 months.

A spokesman in the attorney-general's department this morning said lack of juvenile treatment facilities is a problem not only in Victoria but throughout the province.

He said the department's decision is not a criticism of children's aid societies in Victoria and Vancouver. The decision to refer more juvenile cases to adult court will be applied throughout British Columbia, the spokesman said.

The 1968 amendments to the Protection of Children Act, he said, anticipated development of treatment facilities. These facilities have developed slowly, necessitating the department's decision, he said.

Wright said the intention of the amendments was to provide an alternative to jailing, even though they allow children's aid societies to send a juvenile to jail if necessary.

Wright agrees this sometimes has to happen, but he said he does not think private agencies such as the F and CS should have this power.

"The power to send a person to prison should not be in the hands of a private agency but

'HAWKS' INVADE N.Y. CITY HALL

NEW YORK (AP)—More than 1,000 young men, many of them construction workers expressing opposition to Mayor John V. Lindsay's anti-war sentiments, stormed city hall today, clashing with police and student peace demonstrators.

The workers, six of them carrying American flags, swarmed into City Hall Park chanting, "Raise that flag."

Lindsay, who had ordered city flags at half staff in memory of the four slain Kent State University, Ohio, students, was downtown attending an anti-war rally.

TAKING THEIR COMPLAINTS to the government, more than 80 parents and students from Qualicum school district quietly register protest over lack of funds that led to a school board decision to cut out side-road busing. No member of the board was present, and Education Minister Donald Brothers was out of town. (Halkett photo.)

2 STUDENTS SHOT DEAD IN CARACAS

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Two students were shot to death and three others were wounded Thursday in rioting that followed a demonstration against U.S. intervention in Cambodia. Police denied opening fire on the protestors.

Meanwhile, in the United States, memorial services were held for the four students shot dead at Kent University. See Page 3.

Communists Batter Northern Provinces

Times News Services

The Indochina war erupted with renewed fury today as the Communists battered South Vietnam's northernmost provinces with rockets and mortars and battled in the streets in two provincial capitals.

In the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia, a South Vietnamese force was hit hard in heavy fighting.

A combined Vietnamese-U.S. Naval convoy has started up the Mekong River to take relief supplies to the Cambodian capital of Phnon Penh.

Convoy Must Pass Through Reds

The flotilla must first pass through 30 miles of river controlled by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces.

As 30,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops continued their drive against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bases and supply depots in Cambodia, the guerrillas shelled 64 bases and towns in South Vietnam.

Da Nang, the country's second largest city, and two other provincial capitals just to the south, Hoi An and Tam Ky, were hit hardest. North Vietnamese commandos battled in the streets of Hoi An and Tam Ky, raiding government supply depots.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 75 were killed and 83 wounded in the attacks on the three cities and the mining of a bus south of Da Nang.

Thirty-one guerrillas were reported killed.

Anniversary Of French Defeat

The new attacks came on the heels of the 16th anniversary Thursday of the French defeat at Dien Bien Phu. In its observance of the occasion, Hanoi called on the Vietnamese people to intensify their fight against the United States.

At least 17 U.S. units or installations were attacked with mortars and rockets. The U.S. command said two Americans were killed and 33 wounded.

Headquarters claimed 3,865 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops now have been killed and thousands of tons of equipment and food seized in the half dozen operations in Cambodia since April 29.

Losses so far were put at 49 American and 237 South Vietnamese troops killed and 148 U.S. and 1,051 South Vietnamese troops wounded. Ten American helicopters have been lost.

In the big battle north of Svay Rieng, a South Vietnamese medical officer with the force said 50 government troops were killed and 200 wounded, some of them by their own artillery.

The casualties were the highest reported for government forces in a single action since the U.S. and South Vietnam launched operations against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps inside Cambodia last week.

A South Vietnamese communique reported that 79 Communist troops were killed and 15 captured, including a battalion commander, in fighting Thursday.

A battalion of about 500 South Vietnamese riding tanks and armored personnel carriers was pursuing a Viet Cong battalion. The South Vietnamese slammed into Viet Cong positions in heavy treelines, which were being bombarded by government artillery to soften them up. Some artillery barrages plas-

Work-to-Rule At Hospital

The British Columbia Hospital Employees Union Thursday night began a work-to-rule campaign at Royal Columbian Hospital to protest staff layoffs.

The hospital board decided to cut staff by 50 because of austerity measures instituted by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark. Vice-chairman Dr. R. D. MacNeill, quit in protest.

Meanwhile, hospital director R. B. Thomson Thursday posted a notice to staff saying the quality and quantity of care at the hospital will suffer because of the cuts.

His notice formally advised staff there will be layoffs but gave no details. Medical director R. G. Foulkes, however, said the 50 will include 26 nurses and eight other medical employees.

The union, with 550 members at RCH before staff cuts were announced, said it will post information pickets around the hospital next week. The union has 8,000 members in the province.

RCH board chairman Jack Biggs said the staff laid off will not qualify for unemployment insurance benefits because the provincial government has never agreed to pay a share of contributions.

"In the light of what has happened at RCH," he said, "I think it would be fair of the government to change this policy."

A press release Thursday night outlined service cuts.

—Visting hours, presently from 2-8 p.m., will be 7-8 p.m., except for close relatives.

—Admissions and discharges will be closely regulated; patients will be required to leave promptly in the morning so their bed may be used the same afternoon.

—Non-essential operations, such as plastic surgery, will not be performed on weekends.

—Electro-shock treatment for psychiatric patients will be ended and patients referred to Hollywood or Riverview hospitals.

—The number of doctors on staff, about 200, may be reduced in the fall when additions to Surrey Memorial Hospital are completed.

—Out-patient fees, cost of private and semi-private rooms and meal prices in the staff cafeteria will all increase.

Capital Awaits Rally; Million Students Strike

By HAYNES JOHNSON
The Washington Post

An air of crisis, growing out of events in Cambodia and on American campuses, confronted the U.S. today as the country braced for massive protest demonstrations.

The dimensions of the trouble were reflected in a number of extraordinary events:

- Hundreds of colleges and universities, affecting about a million students, were closed in the first general student strike in the nation's history;
- Hundreds of thousands of citizens began gathering for demonstrations scheduled across the U.S. from the nation's capital to California. In Washington, officials were preparing for more than 100,000 demonstrators and troops were alerted;
- In College Park, Md., the scene of recent turmoil, 900 faculty members and 5,000 students were occupying Cole Field House Thursday night, defying an order to close the university;
- National guardsmen were alerted to stand by in all states to watch over armories and thwart possible acts of arson or violence. Guard units remained in position on five campuses.
- President Nixon summoned the governors of all 50 states to meet him Monday in the White House. They will discuss "the disruption of peace, violence and potential violence throughout the nation," it was announced;
- A Republican governor's conference was cancelled because of conditions. The 13 governors who had come to Santa Fe, New Mexico, were being protected by the state guard before the conference was cancelled.

Many attempted to explain the present unrest. New York's Mayor John Lindsay spoke of the United States being on the verge of a "physical breakdown."

A cabinet officer, Health Secretary Robert Finch, attributed what he called a "national crisis" to the American intervention in Cambodia. That, he said, was the "straw that broke the camel's back."

The immediate causes were President Nixon's announcement of one week ago that the U.S. was sending troops into Cambodia, triggering fears of a wider Asian war, and the slaying of four Kent State students in a clash with national guardsmen Monday.

Middle-Age Vigilantes Hit, Spray Students

SEATTLE (AP) — Groups of middle-aged vigilantes swinging clubs indiscriminantly against students and spraying youths with a chemical substance reportedly roamed the University of Washington campus Thursday night while police and anti-war demonstrators fought on its fringes.

A person identifying himself as Michael Templeton, a UW graduate student in physics, said he "got three or four licks" with that he called "nightsticks or billy clubs" and said they were wielded by a group of 10-15 men. Templeton didn't describe the extent of his injuries.

A Seattle Post-Intelligencer news team said it saw one band of about 12 men in civilian clothes and armed with clubs.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM CHALLENGED

Mailmen Test Ottawa Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury left little doubt Thursday that the federal government is banking its anti-inflation program on a final test of wills with 27,000 postal workers.

The two sides in the contract dispute are well apart from the compromise wage settlement proposed by Judge Rene Lippe of Montreal in a conciliation board report which split three ways on the issue.

The report was made public Thursday. At a news conference, Mr. Drury said the government felt its wage offer "has been adequate."

The government offer would increase wages for postal workers by 16.1 per cent in a 30-month period ending April 1, 1972.

Postmen's Demands — See Background Story Page 43

The demand of the Council of Postal Unions is for a two-year contract, expiring Sept. 30, 1971, which would raise wages by 23.3 per cent. The last postal contract expired Oct. 1, 1969.

Judge Lippe's proposal would have increased the base rate in the post office over the 30-month period by 19.4 per cent to $3.07 from $2.57 an hour. The top rate among those in dispute is now $3.23 an hour.

OTTAWA NEXT FOR CLAIM SAY NISHGAS

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A British Columbia Indian tribe's claim to 4,800 square miles of land in the northern section of the province will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada, the tribe said today.

The Nishga tribe's claim was rejected Thursday for a second time when the B.C. Appeal Court upheld an earlier ruling by the B.C. Supreme Court.

"The case definitely will be going to the Supreme Court of Canada," the president of the Nishga Tribal Council, Frank Calder, said today. Calder is NDP member for Atlin in the B.C. legislature.

. . . COURT

under the protection of the law."

Barrett said he agrees with Wright, that the power to send people to jail should remain with the courts.

This spring, in the legislature, Barrett introduced amendments to the Protection of Children Act which would have required yearly reviews of juveniles sentenced into the care of children's aid societies.

The amendments were defeated.

The attorney-general's department spokesmann said Victoria needs a small detention centre for juveniles.

But the F and CS is making plans for special group homes specifically designed to handle juvenile delinquents.

F and CS directors this week approved the hiring of a supervisor to direct the program. Wright said that when the four homes are open they will be able to handle a total of 32 young offenders.

Wright said there are several reasons behind the new program:

The F and CS assumed entire responsibility in February for developing juvenile treatment facilities for the Victoria area.

There is no longer available space at Brannan Lake and Willingdon for juveniles who cannot be placed with their families, in foster homes, Sevenoaks or existing group homes.

Existing F and CS programs need expansion.

The alternative is to construct a local jail for juveniles.

Under current programs the F and CS has not emphasized detention of juveniles. Wright said a study of 45 juveniles handled by his organization last year showed 10 were placed in group homes, 19 were discharged or sent back to their families, 12 were sent to training schools (now called 'child care resource centres') and four were sent to correctional institutes.

Asked if the shift of more juvenile cases into adult court will affect F and CS plans, Wright said: "We have been absorbing and planning for a greater number of adolescents. This will have no effect on what we're doing."

Wright said there is nothing the F and CS can do about the attorney-general's department decision.

"I think we can do something, but whether this community will let us do it is another question."

He said he is disturbed by the lack of co-ordination in juvenile delinquent programs between the attorney-general's department and the social welfare department.

"This decision will harm juveniles in the province for a long time to come," Wright said.

. . . MAILMEN TEST

with the report, the unions council announced it will ask union members to authorize strike action in a vote set for May 19.

The council stated it is willing to resume negotiations with the treasury board but warned that postal workers will not accept an agreement that does not include a "good increase" and provisions for job security.

It added that the minority ompinion filed by labor consultant William Walsh of Hamilton, Ont., could well become "the strike manifesto of the postal workers."

Copies of the conciliation report are being printed in both French and English and will be distributed to all union members within the next week.

The government position set out in the report by Keith Campbell, a vice-pre-president of Canadian Pacific Railway, is that the present economic climate demands "the utmost restraint in the amount of the wage increase that should be either sought by the employees or granted by the employer."

CALLS IT 'UNREALISTIC'

In sharp contrast, Mr. Walsh said "it would be unrealistic to expect the 27,000 postal employees . . . to accept less favorable wage adjustments than are generally being achieved."

Mr. Drury said the government's offer is in line with settlements negotiated with other elements of the public service—most of which have waived the right to strike.

The government is seeking a relatively long-term contract to enable the post office to introduce needed changes, he said. It would not offer a quick settlement that would bring the parties back to the bargaining table within a year to consider the effects of anti-inflation efforts.

At the same time, the government was not prepared to pay an inflated price for the tail-end of a 30-month or three-year agreement. The unions would have to trust that government policies will effectively control the cost of living.

tered the South Vietnamese troops instead.

The Viet Cong opened fire from all sides with rocket grenades and machine-guns. Within a few minutes, South Vietnamese dead and wounded littered the fields.

Some civilian casualties also were reported, but no count was available.

To the northeast, U.S. troops probed for the fourth day through a bunker system described by the White House Thursday as "a major sophisticated base complex" that might be the headquarters of the supreme Communist command.

But field officers said they had no evidence that the headquarters itself had been found and the equipment in the bunkers was not particularly sophisticated.

The base is in the Fishhook region of Cambodia. It was two miles wide and a mile long, and contained about 50 earthen bunkers filled with hundreds of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food. The searchers also found the ruins of a classroom-type building with a capacity for 150 persons.

EIGHT KILLED

Other U.S. troops operating farther to the northeast in Cambodia ran into heavy North Vietnamese fire, and eight Americans were killed, the U.S. command said. It was the most American deaths reported in a single action in Cambodian operations.

Headquarters said 24 North Vietnamese troops were killed in the fight.

Tug Owners 'Vindicated' By Remarks

B.C. Towboat Owners Association today said it has been vindicated by remarks of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey in its stand against striking employees, members of Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

The guild, in its sixth day of a strike that idled most of some 400 towboats operated by association members, earlier found support for its action from the labor minister.

The association said the owners position was completely vindicated by remarks in Ottawa by Mackasey Thursday, including:

"Because it was a unanimous conciliation board report, I frankly would have expected labor to find other ways of settling this dispute rather than going on strike. The government will not attempt to have safety regulations written into the contract. Management has been very fair in this dispute," the minister was quoted.

REFERENCE TO WAGES

The reference was to recommendations for a wage increase, but the guild also wants safety, manning and accommodation provision written into the contract, which were recommended in a separate government report.

The BCTOA said the minister had made his position clear, and was saying in effect what the association had said from the outset, "that there is absolutely no justification for the present strike by the guild, that the association cannot legislate safety in this industry, that this responsibility lies with the department of transport."

Nerve Gas Precautions 'Adequate'

A senior planner with the Emergency Measures Organization in Ottawa said today government officials are "very satisfied" with precautions Americans are taking on a planned shipment of deadly nerve gas from Okinawa through Juan de Fuca Strait to a storage depot in Oregon.

R. L. Rutherford added that after the shipment reaches Bangor, Wash., "it poses no danger to Canadians."

B. J. Perry from the defence research board said the only possible danger to Canada would occur if there was an explosion aboard ship and material thrown into the air. This would require an explosion in excess of 500 tons of TNT.

The Weather and You

I was glad to walk down to Jeff's place this morning to call on the old Wyoming cowboy and see how he was doing after his mild heart attack. He was feeling good. He said he would be back in the saddle in a few days and exercising his seven horses. His wife winked at me behind his back, as though to signal "maybe."

Jeff then reminisced about his days on the old Flying U Bar before he retired, and as usual he brought the weather into it. "One thng a cowboy knows," he said, "is that when the night sky is going to be overcast after a pretty cool day in the spring, the temperature for sleeping by the fire a day's ride from the home ranch is going to be warmer.

"A cowboy doesn't mind sleeping out in all kinds of weather in the spring and summer, if he has a little shelter; but he'd rather be in the bunkhouse on a clear night. In the spring that night will be cold and maybe frosty."

Shooting of Students Murder If No Sniper Fired — Agnew

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew says the fatal shooting of four Kent State University students by Ohio National Guard troops was murder if guardsmen fired without warning and without having been fired upon.

"I don't condone their action," he said of the guardsmen. "They responded with far too much force than they should have."

Agnew's remarks were in an interview Thursday night by David Frost whose television talk show is syndicated by Westinghouse. The videotaped interview will be aired next Wednesday.

Frost asked Agnew: "If it is discovered there was no shot fired at them by a sniper, and they just opened fire without a warning shot or anything . . . is the word for that 'murder'?"

"Yes, but not first-degree," the vice-president replied.

". . . When there is no premeditation but simply an overresponse in the heat of anger that results in a killing, it is a murder, and it certainly cannot be condoned."

Agnew said the guardsmen "were probably under a great amount of tension. One or two may have lost control and that caused the tragedy. . . .

"I would guess that if a very volatile young man got a brick in the neck or in the ribs he might just blow up," Agnew said.

"One of the things that is overlooked in that incident is that the guardsmen . . . are young people, too.

"They are no older, for the most part, than the students. And if the students are not charged with a high level of responsibility in their conduct, then perhaps we should not impose upon the guardsmen a higher level."

ROCKS THE START?

"It seems to me," Agnew said, "that had the rocks not been thrown there would have been no chance of the killing."

Frost: "And I suppose had the tear gas not been thrown, the rocks wouldn't have been thrown?"

Agnew: "That's right, and had the buildings not been burned and the threatening assembly not been conducted, the tear gas wouldn't have been thrown."

Frost: "I suppose we could go on, had the president not announced the excursion into Cambodia, maybe the demonstrations wouldn't have taken place."

Agnew: "Well, now you are going back into an interesting area."

Go Ahead and Vote . . . But Be Sure You Vote 'Yes'

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's a telephone number in Washington that ostensibly has been set up to receive calls from persons wanting to voice approval or disapproval of President Nixon's movement of troops into Cambodia.

UPI in New York made four telephone calls in rapid succession this morning. Two were votes favorable to the President and the caller immediately was switched to someone who answered "White House."

The other two callers were against the President. They never got past the first man to answer the telephone in Washington. Here's how the calls went:

UPI—"I'd like to register a vote for the President.

White House—"Yes, you certainly can."

UPI—"This is the White House, I hope."

White House—"Yes. Where do you live?"

UPI—"New Jersey."

White House—"All right, thank you very much for your call."

UPI—"Listen, are you taking votes?"

White House—"No, I'm not taking votes. Are you taking votes?"

UPI—"I'd like to register a vote against President Nixon."

White House—"You're way late, where have you been?"

UPI — "You're not taking votes?"

White House—"I'm not taking any votes and haven't been taking any votes."

UPI—"I'd like to register a vote for President Nixon's policy please."

White House—"You certainly can. Can I have your name please?"

UPI—"James Coburn, Weekhawken, N.J."

White House—"I'll take a message if you want to give me one. Give it to me."

UPI—"I don't want to say too much except that I am thoroughly in agreement with everything that the President has said."

White House — "Okay, James, and we really appreciate that now, and I can tell you that he does too. Thank you very much."

UPI—"I understnad you are taking votes and I'd like to say I'm against the President and Vice-President Agnew too, and the policy. Can I register that please?"

White House—"You want to vote on the President?"

UPI—"Yeah, I'm against what he has been saying."

White House—"This poll is being taken on the extension of troops into Cambodia and not on whether or not your're against the President."

UPI—"I'm against the extension of troops into Cambodia and against any more American troops going anywhere in Southeast Asia."

White House—"Where are you calling from?"

UPI—"New York City."

NIXON TAKES BACK HOSTILE COMMENTS

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon assured a group of university presidents Thursday that hostile comments against college groups by members of his administration, including Vice-President Agnew, would cease.

Mr. Nixon himself has expressed to his staff distress over his own impromptu remark last week in which he called students "bums" who burn books and destroy buildings, it was learned.

A Wasteful Way

THE 22 MILLION PEOPLE OF Canada are threatened with a possible country-wide strike of mail workers within two weeks—a re-run of the tiresome charade that hampered the nation for three weeks only two years ago. The walkout in 1968 took place under the right established by changes in the Public Service Act and it was ended with the signing of a contract which, among other commitments, ensured that there would be no further strikes for two years.

It seems clear that postal workers — an essential but not particularly highly qualified group in the nation's labor force — are attracted by the possibilities of negotiating power which the strike of a key service gives them. This becomes a means of winning a better wage settlement than they otherwise would, but it is leverage based not on the merit of their claims but only on the degree to which they disrupt the nation's business.

Clearly, postal work is an essential part of the country's lifelines, a necessary element of the fabric of Canada's communication, commerce and social existence. Equally clearly the postal system should be returned to a non-striking category, with proper safeguards to ensure that the workers receive fair treatment in negotiation so that they lose no rightful demands through relinquishment of strike action. There should be no injustice in such an arrangement: the workers would be hired with the mutual recognition that job security and fair negotiation would protect them while ensuring continuity of a necessary national function.

The country's vital need for steady postal services is seen as an exploitable situation by some union officials. It would be unfortunate if the union and its members as a whole took so limited a view of their status as that contained in the reported comment of a Victoria postal workers' union official that the action of the federal government in sending out pension and welfare cheques early, in order to have them delivered before a possible strike this month, was merely an attempt to avoid criticism if a shutdown occurred.

It is incredible — and rather revealing — that a workers' representative could interpret this action as merely a political gimmick. Does the plight of pensioners and welfare recipients left without income by reason of a postal strike carry no weight in itself? Is there no merit in a government's attempting to prevent that hardship? It appears that the spokesman is chagrined at having lost a good anti-government lever that would be provided by the pressure of pensioners stranded without funds.

The establishment of fair wages and conditions of work should be on a nobler basis than is implied in the spokesman's charge. The patience of the public is long — but not necessarily endless.

The Men Close to Mr. Nixon

FORMER PRESIDENT JOHNSON repeatedly rejected Cambodian invasion plans but President Nixon has accepted them. Mr. Nixon's advisers provide hints as to why the current action was undertaken. According to the Washington Post, Attorney General John Mitchell was the leading advocate of strong military action, while Defence Secretary Melvin Laird believed that only South Vietnamese troops accompanied by United States advisers should move into Cambodia.

After the National Security Council meeting of April 22, Mr. Nixon activiated the Washington Special Action Group, a highly secret committee of senior officials including Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms, foreign affairs adviser Henry Kissinger and General Earle Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff. These men, none of whom are noted for "dovish" views, reportedly made up a number of alternative plans and the President endorsed the one that is now unfolding in Cambodia.

Throwing some light on the thinking of at least one member of the group, a recent issue of U.S. News and World Report quotes General Wheeler as saying, "I don't mean that everybody who is against the American military ... is a Communist agent or Communist inspired. But I certainly think it's more than mere coincidence that this kind of thing is going on ..."

That one of the most powerful men in the United States should hold views that contain more than echoes of McCarthyism is disturbing in this far more complex time. Even more worrisome is the news that U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers was not informed about the impending Cambodian action. As late as April 23 Mr. Rogers told House members that the administration's Vietnam policy would fail "if we escalate and we get involved in Cambodia with our ground troops."

Inconsistencies and politicial tunnel-vision have been well documented among the men who serve President Nixon. The same symptoms are present in any government of men, but their prevalence in the Nixon administration has grown alarmingly in recent months. The free-world can only hope the symptoms do not become the disease.

Defensive in Israel

IT IS DIFFICULT TO READ INTO dispatches from the Middle East any suggestion that Israelis and Arabs are nearing an approach to peaceful negotiation of their differences. When news items do not report raids by one side or the other, they discuss mounting concern in Israel over expanded use of Soviet personnel and equipment in Egypt's defence system.

Yet in Israel itself Prime Minister Golda Meir has felt it necessary to launch a counter-offensive on the home front to repudiate charges that "not enough has been done to bring peace with the Arab states closer." This development follows earlier refusal by the Israeli government to approve a meeting between Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress, and President Nasser.

Mrs. Meir's efforts, through press and radio interviews, have centred on the theme that on previous occasions Israel has, with honest intent, tried to persuade the other side to begin negotiations leading to peaceful settlement. In every instance, she says, these attempts have died through the refusal of Nasser to indicate any willingness to make peace.

This is not an unusual position for Israel's prime minister to adopt. Each side has made periodic proposals ostensibly aimed at peace negotiations, but under terms unacceptable to the other. What is unusual is that Mrs. Meir has found it necessary to launch her counter-offensive at all.

The debate even in her own Labor Party — meeting behind closed doors this week — is far from over. The doves within its ranks cannot hope to advance far along the road to conciliation with the Arabs unless any overture from them invites some reciprocal action from Egypt. It appears, however, that the doves are prepared to try.

FROM MONTREAL

By RICHARD PURSER

The Real Separatist Battle Begins Now

FEEDBACK from the rest of Canada, as gleaned from press commentary summaries and reports of reactions from public figures and men in the street, suggests wide misunderstanding of last week's Quebec provincial election. There is a tendency to regard the event as the end of a long struggle over separatism; but here it is regarded as only the beginning.

Purser

Locally, the joy is over the election of a strong and stable Liberal government because of its expected improvement in competency over the inept and discredited National Union government.

The joy isn't chiefly over the fact that the new government will be basically federalist in approach, as seems to be the case in reaction outside Quebec. It is realized here that it is not yet time to crow; Quebec's ultimate decision remains in suspension.

A French-Canadian view of English-Canadian reaction might prove informative. Written under the exasperated headline "They are crazy, these English-Canadians!" by Pierre — C. O'Neil of the Ottawa bureau of La Presse — it appeared on Page 1 of Montreal's largest newspaper.

It is always a marvel to read the English-Canadian papers the morning after Quebec's great joys and sorrows, Mr. O'Neil wrote, but after the election they surpassed themselves. "They've been at it since last Wednesday and their reactions to date indicate that they are divided between a gentle paternalism, a certain feeling of guilt and an effort to be hopeful."

Deriding Toronto Press

Mr. O'Neil dismissed the election reportage of Toronto newspapers, such as the "separatism has been rejected" of the Globe and Mail and the "Quebec opts for Canada" of the Telegram. He thought the Globe's statement that the Quebec Liberals were elected "on a federalist policy put forward with audacity" reflected the newspaper's audacity more than the truth of the statement. He also criticized the paper for ridiculing the 34 per cent support for separatism recorded in a pre-election opinion poll. (The figure is actually considered approximately accurate, including those with independence sympathies who suspected the Parti Quebecois' approach or policies and voted National Union or even Liberal.)

An article in the Toronto Star, as retranslated here back from Mr. O'Neil's French, reported Prime Minister Trudeau as appearing "as the master of politics in Quebec and the faithful interpreter of the sentiments of Quebec ... His style of federalism appears acceptable to Quebec, and English-Canadians who hope that Mr. Trudeau will put French Canada in its place will at least be able to sleep more peacefully at night."

Offending Quebec

If that had been written in advance of the election and circulated by the PQ in Montreal as a campaign broadsheet, one could imagine it costing the Liberals another seat or two.

Remarks from one small sample of the English-language press, that of Toronto, do not reveal any ill intentions toward Quebec, or even any deliberate insensitivity. It may well be that the average English-Canadian sees no insensitivity at all in them. Yet such remarks, and even less, can cause the most federalist of Quebecers to wonder what's the use — are we still two solitudes?

No, the battle is not over. Quebec voted for good government and quick economic improvement, and only incidentally in the process gave federalism its real — and therefore, possibly — its last chance to prove itself here. The only party Quebec could vote for without risk of continued incompetence (UN), plain silliness (Creditistes), or rapid adventurism (PQ) was Liberal.

The winning party happens to be federalist. But Rene Levesque and the separatist PQ are riding higher than ever. He and his little band of seven members of the National Assembly, which soon may be reduced to six by a recount demanded by an unseated Liberal, will be watchdogs of the government as few governments have been watchdogged.

In the first electoral effort of a party only recently in existence, the PQ got a startling 23 per cent of the vote. Taking into account the virtual 100 per cent vote of the non-French population for the Liberals, Mr. Levesque is not far off in claiming that his party may have won the largest share of purely French-speaking votes. In any event, he has a sound base from which to work.

A truly remarkable politician, Mr. Levesque has within a few days managed to snatch moral victory from the jaws of official defeat. Although the official opposition will be the National Union, Mr. Levesque has established himself as the true opposition leader by virtue of coming second in the popular vote.

By loudly challenging Quebec's distorted electoral map, designed to keep the National Union in power as long as possible, he has forced Mr. Bourassa into acknowledging redistribution as an early priority, and will hold him to it. The electoral map was originally designed to keep the National Union in power. The Liberals have tended to favor reform, as an increase in urban ridings would benefit themselves. But now it would benefit the PQ more by dividing the urban Montreal working class ridings where it has established itself.

As the self-styled party of democratic independence, the PQ will be heard from a great deal during the next four years. Camille Laurin, Robert Burns and Marcel Leger, designated by Mr. Levesque as the party's parliamentary spokesman, house leader and whip respectively, are certain to be effective. So should one of the members to be watched with greatest interest, Claude Charron, the intellectual youth spokesman who won in one of Montreal's poorest and most disaffected districts. At 23 the youngest member ever to be elected in Quebec, he is working on a master's degree at the University of Montreal while simultaneously working as professor of political science at two junior colleges.

Mr. Levesque himself, as a professional journalist, will have no trouble getting his views across from outside the Assembly.

The real battle for Quebec's status will begin when the Assembly sits in June, and will last for a time that will make the first two years of the Parti Quebecois seem like an interlude.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JAMES RESTON

How to Help the Adversary

IF YOU'RE A LITTLE CONFUSED about what's going on around here these days, it may because you haven't caught on to the new rule of politics. The new rule is that logic is out and reverse logic is in, and under this rule everybody talks and acts against his own self-interest and in the interest of his opponent. Take a small example. Kingman Brewster, the president of Yale, loves his university and the law. So he makes a statement that he is "skeptical of the ability of black revolutionaries to achieve a fair trial anywhere in the country."

Reston

This was supposed to help protect Yale from the wrath of the Black Panthers, but all it did was to hurt Brewster, Yale, and the law, and give Vice-President Agnew a fit. But wait.

The Vice-President, in his anger, applied the same reverse logic. He called publicly for the dismissal of Brewster and thus provoked a massive demonstration in Brewster's support. It is an interesting new techinque.

Another way to understand the new wrong-way politics is to remember that everybody's now his own worst enemy. Presidential advisor Pat Moynihan at the White House thought a little less controversy about the race problem would be a good thing for the Negroes and everybody else. So he used a fancy phrase to convey his idea — "benign neglect." Result: the opposite of what he intended: more controversy over race relations than before.

It is only when reverse logic is practised at the very pinnacle of the Government that you see the possibilities of the new system. President Nixon wanted a Southerner on the Supreme Court and led the charge with such aggressive clumsiness that he had to settle for a pleasant man from Minnesota.

His formula for "bringing us together" is to tear us apart, and his latest experiment with the new technique is an attempt to end the war more quickly in Vietnam by expanding it into Cambodia.

One has to wonder what ever happened to all the early talk about low profiles and lower voices and Nixon doctrines to minimize American involvement in other people's war. It was working fine for the President.

By bringing the boys home from Vietnam, cutting the military budget, sweet-talking the Congress, and crying peace to the world, he had the Democrats, the demonstrators, and even the press off-balance or off-key, and then he began to over-play his hand.

Now there is a reaction to the backlash. There is more opposition in the Senate to the President's move into Cambodia than to any other Presidential action in the foreign policy field in the last ten years. The President's challenge to the Senate's constitutional right of confirmation has aroused the upper chamber against him, and even the Democrats are beginning to think they may still be alive.

Rule of Compensation

In short, the old rule of compensations is at work again. Every excessive pressure produces a counter-pressure. This rule worked at first against the militants who resorted to violence. It worked against the press when it overplayed the violence and the negative. It worked against the excessive profit margins of business and the stock market, and it is working now against the Administration's policy in Cambodia.

No doubt this will all settle down in time, but the mood of the moment is anxious and even irrational. Even if the President succeeds in his policies of clearing out the military sanctuaries in Cambodia, and bringing the boys back home, there is clearly no assurance that the enemy will not drift back into Cambodia, or create new and even more dangerous diversions elsewhere, as the Soviet fighter pilots and missile technicians are now doing in the Middle East.

It is a bad time in foreign relations, race relations, university relations, economic relations and human relations, and the Administration seems to be developing an infallible instinct for doing the wrong thing. The unavoidable perplexities are understandable but the avoidable stupidities are intolerable. Failure seems to have gone to their heads.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of May 8, 1910:

From all indications the coming summer will see an unprecedented influx of tourists from Southern California seeking relief from the hot weather which makes June, July and August the most unpleasant months of the year in the vicinity of Los Angeles. During the past couple of years the charms and attractions of Victoria have, through increased advertising, become better known to the people of the south.

In Reverse

New York Times

In sending American troops into Cambodia, President Nixon has rejected his own Nixon Doctrine in Southeast Asia, escalating a war from which he had promised to disengage. This is not the "new" Nixon who campaigned on a platform pledged to peace. It is more like the old Nixon who as Vice-President in 1954 said the United States would have to send troops into Indochina if there were no other way to prevent its fall to the Communists, then on the verge of defeating the French.

Fortunately, now as then, Mr. Nixon's tough approach has produced strong opposition in both houses of Congress, even among some former staunch supporters of his Vietnamization policy. The shocking expansion of this still undeclared war that was announced last night warrants the assertion by Congress of its constitutional powers of restraint on behalf of a people who have been asked once too often to swallow the military hallucination of victory through escalation.

Status of Women

Windsor Star

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey likes women who are cuddly, gentle, pretty, and in the kitchen. He revealed this unstartling opinion in what started out as a good-humored exchange with two (woman) reporters who cornered him after he had already been on the hot seat in the Commons.

Many women, perhaps too many, agree with Mackasey's ill-considered statements. The role of "Amazon," as Mackasey calls militant women, is one women would not accept.

But those women who actively involve themselves in a political strategy designed to give all women equal rights with men must find it frustrating when their sisters don't flock to the banner.

It is axiomatic in Canada that women are paid salaries well below a man's (even if the work done is of the same importance and quality). It is equally evident that the upper echelon positions in any Canadian hierarchy go, for the most part, to men, even when there are competent, qualified women to perform that position's function.

For too long, women have been denied the right to compete with men. Perhaps a gentle, cuddly minister of labor would help the situation.

Crime Deterrent

London Free Press

The capture of two suspected bank robbers in south London was a textbook illustration of the effectiveness of police-citizen teamwork in the fight against crime. It was also a tribute to the courage and alertness of the off-duty officer who initiated the chase.

Knowledge among the criminal element that citizens are ready and willing to assist police can be an effective deterrent to crime. Citizen apathy is the edge criminals count on for success.

Get Bureaucrats Out of the CBC

By DOUGLAS MARSHALL
Maclean's

The time has come, in the interests of Canada's future and common sense, to request the resignation of CBC president George Davidson.

Neither Davidson nor the corporation's vice-president, Laurent Picard, should be encouraged to remain in office for another television season.

They have had long, loyal and constructive careers as public servants. But no service they've yet rendered could be as noble as their now surrendering the CBC to leaders who know something about broadcasting.

It is clear that the survival of this country depends to some extent on the existence of a healthy, productive, non-commercial broadcasting service.

It is also clear that certain refreshing forces, particularly the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, are determined that the CBC should cease to be a public network manque and begin to live up to its responsibilities.

This rehabilitation can only be achieved by flushing the old philosophy out of the corporation's clogged system, starting at the top.

Davidson and Picard are singularly talented men. But, as they'll both be the first to admit, before their 1968 CBC appointments they were radio and video virgins.

Picard emerged from a background devoted to commercial and industrial research to rule on the corporation's day-to-day decisions.

Didn't Own a TV

Davidson, who became responsible for overall broadcasting policy, had been Ottawa's senior civil servant — the mandarin's mandarin at the Treasury Board.

He didn't even own a television set until 1966, when he bought one secondhand from a friend. It wasn't until last year that CBC underlings put a TV monitor in his office. Davidson hadn't bothered to ask for one.

It is one of the abiding absurdities of this curious country that our paramount cultural institution has continued to be presided over by bureaucrats. (Thank heavens the NFB somehow avoided this fate. Imagine where the film board would be now if an accountant who had never seen a movie had been given John Grierson's job in 1939.)

I'll concede that, for once, the CBC probably needed an efficient bureaucrat when Davidson took command. He has restored order to what was fast becoming an administrative shambles.

More deserving of honor, the astute tactics that made him top bowler in parliament's corridors of power have enabled him to protect the CBC — perhaps preserve its very being. — from political dogs that were snarling for blood.

But that task is done. And Davidson's administrative efficiency has been costly in other directions. Prim, vouchers-in-triplicate thinking still permeates the CBC.

As certain early catastrophes of the current CBC - TV season proved, we are now sometimes confronted with an invidious mutant of imaginative broadcasting — the bureaucratic producer.

Such producers, by the nature of their mutation, cling to their jobs tenaciously. It takes strong and anti-bureaucratic leadership to dislodge them.

Hook Into NET

A truly creative head of the CBC would quickly put into effect a series of public-interest policies that have been wickedly vetoed so far. Among those that spring to mind:

● Initiating some form of transmission hookup with the National Educational Network in the United States. The CBC has been happy to build its schedules around live feeds and taped programs supplied by the American commercial networks. But NET, the only real public network in this continent, is ignored. Thus NET's culturally rich, basically universal fare is being denied to most Canadians in favor of such arrant U.S. tosh as Green Acres.

● Ensuring that never again will a program as obviously popular as The Forsyte Saga take three years to get here. It's a measure of the CBC's continuing hostility to public service that this 26-week serial is finally being broadcast during the summer off-season when vacations will hopelessly disrupt the plot sequence for many viewers.

Fill Out Forms

There are rumors — too vague to track down, too frequent to forget — that certain powers in Ottawa still hope to dismantle the CBC. If that happens, we may as well begin filling out our American citizenship forms.

The best way to prevent it is to turn the Davidson - strengthened corporation over to a leader familiar with the dynamics of broadcasting.

The Quiet Men Who Run the Universities

By ROSS H. MUNRO

TORONTO — Who has the power in Ontario universities to choose a new president or approve a building program?

The faculty? The administration? The students?

The answer is that none of these groups, individually or collectively, has the legal power—nor often the effective power—to make these decisions.

That power still rests with boards of governors that are usually dominated by outside laymen drawn for the most part from the worlds of business and finance.

Despite three years of debate about reforming university government—a debate usually centering around abolition of the boards—these governors still remain on top of the legal power pyramid in every university in Ontario.

The governors are quiet, often self-effacing men who like to stay out of the public limelight. On the rare occasions when they agree to talk about their role in the university, they want the interview to be off the record.

The governors talk loudest behind the closed doors at meetings of the board or the board's executive committee where the real power often lies. The news that filters out of these meetings proves that governors are still playing crucial roles in many universities.

● After months of struggle with the faculty-dominated senate at York University, York's governors have retained the decisive power to choose the university's new president.

● Members of the same board pressured the university administration — unsuccessfully as it turned out—to cancel last fall's student-sponsored Year of the Barricade, which brought student radicals from Europe and North America to a conference at Glendon College.

● Governors of the University of Waterloo have pressured the university administration—again unsuccessfully—to censor the radically oriented student newspaper, The Chevron.

● At Laurentian University in Sudbury, the board continued to support the president, Stanley G. Mullins, even after he had demonstrably lost the support of both faculty and students. The board's executive committee backed down only after the students staged an eight-day sit-in and the senate cancelled final examinations in protest.

Liberal education critic Tim Reid said in a recent interview that incidents such as these are warning signals.

"My prediction is that unless university government reform is implemented very soon we are going to be faced with crises on our campuses.

"I assume and I believe that those with power in our universities want and intend to keep it even to the point that our universities are going to be disrupted."

Boards of governors have their origin in that era not so long ago when universities were the preserves of the elite. The elitist boards oversaw the training of the new elite and funnelled large private donations into university coffers.

Despite a turnabout in financing, one of the surest ways of garnering an appointment to a university board still is playing an active part in now infrequent university fund-raising campaigns.

Both university governors who agreed to be interviewed for this article had raised substantial sums of money for their respective universities before their appointments. One of them had single-handedly raised $3 million.

Appointment as a university governor has traditionally carried with it a tremendous amount of prestige. Until the legitimacy of the board recently came under challenge, appointment to the University of Toronto's board was the equivalent of the conferring of provincial knighthood.

The exact process by which appointments to the boards are made is cloaked in mystery. As one governor bluntly put it, "that's something that no one will talk about."

Contrary to popular belief, most university governors aren't appointed by the provincial government. Five university boards have no provincial appointees. Another eight boards have a small minority of governors—from two to five—appointed by the province. The University of Toronto is an exception; all 32 governors are provincial appointees.

Most boards in fact are mainly self-perpetuating. They decide who they're going to appoint to fill vacancies as they arise. This was the case the other day at York when the board appointed former Metro chairman William G. Allen to a four-year term which—according to province-wide tradition—will be automatically renewed for as many times as he wishes.

Despite this appointment process, the main argument raised in favor of preserving boards of governors is that they somehow represent the community in general and the provincial taxpayer in particular.

A professor who has been doing research on boards of governors says that this argument is nonsense. Leo Johnson, a history professor at the University of Waterloo, says that governors represent the interests of business, not the community.

Prof. Johnson's governor-by-governor analysis of eight university boards in southern Ontario shows that two banks alone—the Toronto-Dominion Bank and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce—have 23 of their own directors serving on those eight boards.

Prof. Johnson slyly suggests that the number of bank directors serving on a university's board of governors is in fact an excellent indication of the status of that university. The University of Toronto has 10 governors who are bank directors, York has eight, Queen's has six and McMaster has five.

Prof. Johnson's research also notes the number of publishers in single-newspaper university towns serving as governors. Publishers in London, Waterloo, Kingston and Sudbury are governors of their local university; most of the publishers also have local broadcasting interests.

Students at Laurentian University in Sudbury zeroed in on the intertwining of the university and the media during their recent sit-in. When the controversy surrounding the president was made public by The Globe and Mail, the Sudbury Daily Star responded by running a front-page editorial praising the president. The Star's publisher, J. R. Meakes, sits on the executive committee of Laurentian's board of governors.

Prof. Johnson stops short of saying there's a capitalist conspiracy involved or suggesting that boards of governors somehow have their hand in the day-to-day affairs of the university.

"It's natural to expect that boards dominated by big businessmen would attempt to influence the university to inculcate their values in the students," he said. "The most important method of imparting these values lies in the choice of president, which is entirely within their power."

To a significant extent, Queen's University in Kingston must be excluded from the provincial picture. While most boards of governors meet once a month, the equivalent body at Queen's—the board of trustees—meets less frequently and takes a less active role. Some observers say that as a result, Queen's academic senate is one of the most powerful and effective in the province.

The Fruits Of War

By VICTORIA BRITTAIN

Saigon today stands as an example of what Indochina has become with American occupation.

To a visitor it is a hell-hole of noise, filth and misery which no one should become accustomed to. Every street is jammed with Hondas. And on the dirty, broken pavements they stand in gleaming ranks for sale.

The bargirls on the streets with American soldiers are defiant, passing a battery of abuse from their own people. The GIs look like guilty high-school kids caught out late on a weekend date — what will Mom say?

The Vietnamese families squatting in shacks along the railway line smell as though they are rotting. In the orphanages the children displaced and lost by the movement of the war are lifeless, stinking lumps of humanity.

In one sweltering room crammed with 30 cots last week I saw a baby with a ping-pong ball swelling under its arm: 'bubonic plague,' the fat slattern minding the children said laconically. Officially there is no plague in Saigon.

Small demonstrations are almost daily happenings in Saigon. Two dozen or so students face a rank of paramilitary police with big round shields in their hands and tear-gas canisters strapped to their jackets.

In Saigon the legacy of American occupation is an emasculated, Westernized city devoid of character. A people without nationhood.

But Then, It's Only History

By DAVID S. BRODER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Unable to sleep well after hearing President Nixon explain his decision to launch an American offensive against enemy sanctuaries in Cambodia, a temporarily displaced Washington journalist, cut off from the usual "informed sources," turned to his copy of Thucydides' History of the Peloponnesian War.

This being the 16th anniversary of Mr. Nixon's well-remembered speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, advocating American intervention to rescue the French at Dienbienphu, it seemed natural enough to read the account of the 16th year of the war which ended Athenian democracy 2,400 years ago.

There is found the story of the Athenian conquest of Melos, "a colony of Lacedaemon that would not submit to the Athenians like the other islanders and at first remained neutral and took no part in the struggle."

Although the envoys from Athens — representatives of the ancient world's highest civilization—explained to the stubborn colony's leaders that "As the world goes, right is only in question between equals in power, while the strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must," the Melians obstinately declined to yield.

So Athens was put to the bother of conquest, "and subsequently sent out 500 colonists and inhabited the place themselves . . . and the winter ended and with it ended the 16th year of this war.

"Early in the spring of the following summer" — a time exactly as far removed from the start of the Peloponnesian War as we are today from Dienbienphu — "the Athenian envoys arrived from Sicily, and the Egestaeans with them . . . the Athenians held an assembly, and after hearing from the Egestaeans and their own envoys a report as attractive as it was untrue . . . voted to send 60 ships to Sicily.

"They were to help the Egestaeans against the Selinuntines" — the names were as confusing then as they are today; that is one of the persistent aggravations of foreign wars — "and to order all other matters in Sicily as they should deem best for the interest of Athens.

"Five days after this, a second assembly was held, to consider the speediest means of equipping the ships, and to vote whatever else might be required by the generals for the expedition; and Nicias, who had been chosen for the command against his will and who thought that the state was not well advised . . . upon a slight and specious pretext to aspire to the conquest of the whole of Sicily, came forward in the hope of diverting the Athenians from the enterprise."

Thucydides then gives this paraphrase of Nicias' speech:

"Although this assembly was convened to consider the preparations to be made for sailing to Sicily, I think . . . that we ought not to give so little consideration to a matter of such moment, or let ourselves be persuaded by foreigners into undertaking a war with which we have nothing to do . . .

"You leave many enemies behind you here to go yonder and bring more back with you . . . and it is only too probable that if they found our power divided, as we are hurrying to divide it, they would attack us vigorously . . . a man ought therefore, to consider these points and not to think of running risks with a country placed so critically, or of grasping at another empire before we have secured the one we have already . . .

"We should also remember that we are but now enjoying some respite from a great pestilence and from war, to the no small benefit of our estates and persons, and that it is right to employ these at home on our own behalf, instead of using them on behalf of these exiles . . . who do nothing but talk themselves and leave the danger to others, and who if they succeed will show no proper gratitude, and if they fail will drag down their friends with them.

"And if there be any man here, overjoyed at being chosen to command, who urges you to make the expedition . . . do not allow such a one to maintain his private splendor at his country's risk, but remember that such persons injure the public fortune while they squander their own . . .

"I, in my turn, summon any of the older men that may have such a person sitting next to them not to let himself be shamed down, for fear of being thought a coward if he do not vote for war, but, remembering how rarely success is got by wishing and how often by forecast, to leave to them the mad dream of conquest, and, as a true lover of his country, to hold up his hand on the other side; to vote that the Siceliots be left in the limits now existing between us . . . to enjoy their own possessions and to settle their own quarrels; that the Egestaeans, for their part, be told to end by themselves with the Selinuntines the war which they began without consulting the Athenians; and that for the future we do not enter into alliance, as we have been used to do, with people whom we must help in their need, and who can never help us in ours."

Lest Nicias' eloquence inspire some modern orator to apply these ancient arguments to our doubtless wholly different circumstances in Indochina today, let it be noted that the Athenian assembly overrode his objections and voted to embark on the Sicilian campaign.

That the Athenian forces were trapped and destroyed in Sicily, sealing the doom of Athenian civilization, simply shows to right-thinking persons how little history has to teach us.

High-Flown Phrases Abound In Budget Debate

By JIM HUME

When in spring an alderman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of publicity through the budget debate, don't look for immortal words.

Look instead for high-flown phrases—sounding like brass on utterance, but like a tinkling cymbal a spring day later.

Spring and the budget debates at city hall were ever thus. But this year more so.

As the worried city fathers bend heads to seek and destroy the dollar spent worthlessly; as the world seeks new and better methods of garbage collection and pollution control; Ald. Tom Christie puffs his pipe, emits blue smoke and says:

"Garbage collection in this city is far too good. it should be every 10 days, not every seven days. We are picking up half empty garbage cans all the time."

Ald. Ove Witt is the only alderman to recover sufficiently to reply: "Drop around to my place sometime, you won't find any half empty cans there."

Not for long.

Ald. Peter Pollen is making a plea for kinder thoughts towards the Greater Victoria Library. Held on a tight rein, at $4 per capita, the library, says Pollen, is in dire trouble.

"You are looking at a decaying library," he tells council.

"Then why," asks dollar-watcher Christie, "don't you do something about it. It sounds like a lack of maintenance to me. You tell us the roof's leaking, the stairs are falling down, why don't you get these things fixed."

Pollen mildly suggests that money is required to maintain buildings and asks that in the near future council give some thought to studying what he calls "a five-year renaissance program for the library — which is at present a poor reflection on the community."

Says Ald. Harold Olafson: "I suspect that all this results from this (budget) vote having been chopped away over the years."

Olafson waited a few minutes before offering his next pearl.

It came during discussion on spiralling welfare costs.

In 1970, the city will pay out $2.6 million in welfare costs of which $833,000 will be directly chargeable to the taxpayers of Vicdoria.

And Dennis Young, city manager, warns that with labor troubles increasing the situation could be worse than anticipated.

Says Olafson: "There are too many young people on welfare. If a man can's find a job we should support him, but I don't think we should support these kids."

He made no suggestions as to where "the kids" might find work.

Then there was Pollen darting in with stiletto thrust.

Noting that although the mill rate was dropping, "assessments had risen alarmingly" especially in the business sector, Pollen described the mill rate drop and the tax rate lowering for residential areas as "just a shell game."

Among the highlights of the day was the unusual sight of Ald. Hugh Ramsay being sidetracked. it doesn't happen often.

Ramsay wanted to know why, with recreation facilities in the city losing $95,000 a year, the recreation committee was permitting the Junior Chamber of Commerce to operate a Jaycee Fair concession on city property at the Arena.

Ald. Cecil Parrott said he too was surprised at the break in precedent. The city manager noted that the decision was made against the advice of himself and Community Services Director Jack Morgan.

Said Ramsay: "The danger is that other groups will now come forward and our losses, if we permit them the same concession, will accelerate.

"I can see minor hockey coming in next with an equally very fine plea, and other groups with equally touching appeals."

Said Haddock: "Well, they (the Jaycees) could cut into ours (sales) but then maybe they could increase ours by impulse buying."

Ramsay looked startled, said something about the precedent worrying him and the subject was dropped.

It wasn't the only time the mayor caused eyebrows to rise.

By mid-afternoon with the air growing heavy he demanded to know what an $850 item for a steam cleaner under the new equipment vote meant.

"What is this steam cleaner?" was the way the question popped.

"The one you asked for to clean the sidewalks, your worship," came the quet answer.

Peter Pollen was defending the annual grant of $9,645 to the Bastion Theatre Studio. The studio had been described as a "little group" hardly worthy of support.

Said Pollen: "It isn't so little and it puts on a tremendous program on a very small budget."

Answered Dennis Young: "I took out a season pass for three seasons. But the quality of production has dropped so much that I've just stopped going. And they are getting poor attendance all round. Box office receipts are way down."

The grant survived, but no one knows for how long.

There were brief clashes.

Christie, on firemen "moonlighting:" "There's quite a lot of moonlighting going on. These men get an adequate wage and should stop this."

Young: "There is some moonlighting, but the situation is much improved over the past. Union officials are no happier than we are."

Christie: "It's still bad, it's still prevalent."

Ramsay: "It's one thing to say its prevalent, another to back that statement up with facts. Until you can do that it doesn't cut much ice with me."

End of debate, temporarily.

Haddock on the police department budget, up $119,798 over last year:

"We looked at this budget pretty closely and the only thing we could find that could be cut was Christmas cards, and that was so small we left it in."

Perhaps it was all summed up in the one brief encounter when Ald. Percy Frampton challenged a $22,175 item for Thetis Lake Park.

Frampton pointed out that the park is not used solely by Victoria residents. It serves the district more than the city he said and suggested a 50-cent charge be levied at the main entrance to the park.

The park, eventually, is destined to become a regional district project.

But the city manager noted that the region couldn't take over the park now because it had no authority to spend money on maintenance.

"They can't buy it from us and we can't give it to them because they have no funds to maintain the park," said Young.

"Would you charge everybody, or just per car?" Ramsay asked Frampton. "A lot of youngsters use the park."

"I don't want to be tough on the kids, but I think 50 cents per car wouldn't hurt."

Nobody mentioned that there are a dozen ways — or more — in and out of Thetis Lake Park if the back trails are known.

But Haddock summed the discussion up with the advice: "Let's bring in a report."

A fitting epitaph for a day of debate which achieved the striking of the mill rate — and postponement of further budget debate until today.

HANGING TIME is fast approaching and city parks department gardener Tom Hill works in the Beacon Hill Park nursery putting finishing touches on the lamp-post baskets that have become one of Victoria's trademarks. They're so well known in fact, that the city recently donated one of its globe light stands to San Francisco and two baskets will be flown to the California city as soon as they are ready. Apollo 14 to Land At Previous Target

WASHINGTON (WP) — The space agency announced Thursday that it would fly the crew of Apollo 14 in December to the same Fra Mauro Hills on the moon for which the aborted Apollo 13 mission had been targeted last month.

In making the announcement, NASA administrator Thomas O. Paine said the Apollo 14 mission would be flown by astronauts Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchel and Stuart Roosa, the crew that had been training to land near the crater Littrow at the eastern edge of the moon's Sea of Serenity.

Paine set a tentative launch date for Apollo 14 as Dec. 3, which is a delay of two months from the original Apollo 14 launch date of October 1.

"Information developed so far by the Apollo 13 review board," Paine explained, "indicates that Apollo 14 cannot be launched before Dec. 3.

"Our present assessment," Paine went on, "is that the modifications to the oxygen tanks in the service module of Apollo 14 will require several months to complete."

The changes Paine referred to involve the removal from the Apollo 14 spacecraft at Cape Kennedy of two oxygen tanks, which will be flown to the factory of Beech Aircraft Co. in Boulder, Colo., and rebuuilt.

Vietnam War Protested In Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — A three-day moratorium campaign against the Vietnam war began today with large rallies throughout the country.

Largest rally was in Melbourne where an estimated 30,000 persons blocked traffic for 15 minutes. About 25,000 persons marched in Sydney and another 2,500 in Hobart, but no violence was reported at any of the rallies.

Other demonstrations occurred in Brisbane, Adelaide, Perth and other cities.

In Melbourne, a group of youths strung up an effigy of a U.S. soldier and a Viet Cong flag on a lamp post.

Reporters watching the demonstration in Melbourne, and those in other capitals, said that while the crowds listened attentively to speakers and greeted their points with applause, there was less enthusiasm for slogan chanting.

Hairdressers Blame Selves

TORONTO (CP) —The president of the Ontario Hairdressers Association blames the association itself for the current headaches of that profession.

Michael Hannan said the association should be stronger, to prevent a situation where anyone can start a hairdressing salon—with the result that in Toronto alone 14 city salons are currently advertised for sale.

He would like to see membership in the association expanded from just over 25 per cent of Ontario's 28,500 hairdressers.

Mr. Hannan adds that where strong OHA branches exist, hairdressers are protected. In Sault Ste. Marie beauty supply houses selling retail were threatened if they didn't stop.

"If you don't quit, we stop buying," the association told the beauty houses.

Ninety per cent of Ottawa's beauty operators are association members and no one in the capital can open a salon unless he has been in the business for five years. He must be over 25 years of age and insurable.

This means the public is protected as well as the profession, Mr. Hannan said.

SAYS WIGS ARE FAD

Roco Lofranco, former president of the now-defunct Italian Canadian Hairdressers Association agrees with Mr. Hannan.

At least 1,000 hairdressers, most of them women, are working at home in the Toronto area, he says. They don't have the overhead of the salon owners and frequently they dont' even pay income tax, he claims.

Mr. Hannan adds that poor business management is another reason for so many bankruptcies in the field. He plans to introduce a seminar on salon management in the fall.

On the subject of wigs, Mr. Hannan says he thinks they are a fad. "I can make them look better than a wig can."

Home permanents? "They ruin the hair and we have to fix them."

Too Much East At West Meet Criticized

By JIM NEAVES

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — While the One Prairie Province conference doesn't get under way until Sunday it already has been criticized for being loaded with easterners.

A. M. Harradence, a Calgary lawyer who heads the New West Task Force, says he's afraid they will bring eastern Canadian prejudice with them.

He said he will be at the conference which runs until Wednesday, but he's afraid political realignment of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba would weaken the voice of the West.

"If there were only one voting bloc with one or two weak voices, we'd be pretty easy for the others to deal with. . . . I wonder why the conference doesn't include more Western Canadians in its program?"

Mr. Harradence and his group thinks separation may be the only workable solution to Western problems, but regrets people think he is solely interested in separatism.

"Separatism is a last desperate measure, but if it seems to be the only viable solution to our problems then we'll have to fully consider it."

There is no hint of discussion of western separatism on the program, but the issue—fanned by increasing feelings of alienation in Western Canada—may be difficult to avoid.

Mr. Harradence said the West is fighting discriminatory tariffs and freight rates, a discriminatory oil policy and eastern apathy toward the West.

"We're taking the same drubbing now that we've been taking practically since Confederation," he said.

"Separatist feelings are running pretty close to the surface here and one of our concerns is that we don't arouse or fan this emotion without a solid core of facts on which to base it."

Possibility of 5-Province Canada Kicked Around by Federal Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal cabinet ministers have discussed, though not as government policy, the consolidation of the 10 provinces into five, informed sources say.

The four Atlantic provinces would become one and the three Prairie provinces another single unit.

Veterans Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, New Brunswick representative in the cabinet, has personally endorsed the single-province Atlantic concept in a public speech.

Supply Minister James Richardson, from Manitoba, is expected to do the same for the Prairies in a speech at Lethbridge Sunday night.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, from Alberta, and Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand will also be in Lethbridge to attend a conference on the subject "One prairie province? A question for Canada."

The conference is being sponsored by the University of Lethbridge and the Lethbridge Herald and is expected to attract about 300 economists, businessmen, educationists, administrators and provincial and federal politicians.

It is understood that Mr. Richardson even has a name for the proposed one prairie province but he is saving that for his speech opening the Sunday-to-Wednesday meeting.

Though ministers here have discussed creation of single provinces in the Atlantic and prairie regions as a method of shifting some power from central Ontario and Quebec, there is no government policy as such on the matter, informants said.

This is considered an issue strictly for the provinces themselves.

Supporters of one prairie province would also like to ring in British Columbia but, for the moment, are confining their advocacy to Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba as a single political entity.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have for some time been looking at the possibility of political union and there is some thought that Newfoundland might be included in a single "Atlantis."

Backers of the idea of one prairie province see advantages other than legislative and administrative.

For instance, informants say, they see the possibility of a single prairie region taking responsibility for grain production and marketing instead of leaving this task in federal hands.

One source close to the cabinet said not a single cabinet minister is opposed to the idea of five provinces, though some are not wildly enthusiastic.

Prime Minister Trudeau is among the ministers who has discussed the idea informally.

Lang Accused Of Misleading

OTTAWA (CP) — Minutes after announcing a $20,000,000 wheat sale to Peru, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, was in trouble Thursday.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) charged in the Commons that Mr. Lang "told a deliberate lie" two hours before the announcement in telling the House he didn't plan to make a statement.

"No," Mr. Lang had replied, when asked by Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) whether he intended "to make a statement this afternoon."

Mr. Horner asserted that Mr. Lang had "deliberately misled" the House, then had gone upstairs to sign the sales agreement with the ambassador from Peru.

BARELY DENT

Champagne flowed and flashbulbs popped at the formal signing ceremony, although the 10,300,000-bushel sale will barely dent Canadian stockpiles of 1,000,000,000 bushels.

Mr. Horner's question of privilege was rejected after Mr. Lang explained that he thought Mr. Mazankowski was asking whether there would be a statement in the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said it appeared to be a misunderstanding on all sides.

However, he didn't force Mr. Horner to withdraw the word "lie." A few days ago, Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) withdrew a similar remark at the request of the Speaker.

Under the terms of the wheat sale, Peru will buy 7,400,000 bushels now and a further 2,900,000 during a 12-month delivery period up to June 30, 1971.

Irish Cabinet Reshuffled

DUBLIN (Reuters) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch announced today a cabinet reshuffle to fill the gaps created by his dismissal of two ministers for alleged gun-running.

The ousting of the ministers earlier this week caused one of Ireland's biggest political sensations since the troubles of the 1920s.

Finance Minister Charles Haughey and Agriculture Minister Neil Blaney were accused of trying to smuggle in arms for use in trouble-torn, British-controlled Northern Ireland.

The new finance minister is George Colley, former minister for industry and commerce. The ministry of agriculture went to James Gibbons, promoted from the ranks.

Other appointments:

Defence minister—Gerard Cronin, former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for postal services—Gerry Collins, also a former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for local government—Robert Molloy, a former parliamentary secretary.

Area Change For CN Manager

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Gordon D. MacMillan, Canadian National's area manager for Newfoundland since 1965, has been appointed manager of the railway's Assiniboine area, which includes parts of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario.

Mr. MacMillan, a native of Brandon, Man., begins his new job June 1.

His successor in Newfoundland has not been named.

Hunter Basin

A diamond drilling program has been scheduled by Hunter Basin Mines Ltd. for its Smithers area copper prospect, to start in early June.

Geological mapping and sampling will be done prior to the program getting under way. The King vein will be sampled by test drilling first, to determine the depth of a deposit previously mined by high-grading.

Sufficient allowance for subsequent work has been made out of the $112,500 realized from a public offering last year.

Brascan

Brascan Ltd. says in its annual report to shareholders it plans a gradual program of expansion in Canada.

Formerly Brazilian Light and Power Co. Ltd., the Canadian-based company generates and distributes electric power in the main industrial areas of Brazil.

President J. H. Moore said diversification in Canada depends partly on proposed changes in the Canadian federal tax structure.

Chieftain

Tax Plans Hamper Expansion

OTTAWA (CP)—The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. wnats to undertake a major expansion of its Wabush iron mines in the Labrador area of Newfoundland but is being held back by its American associates, Stelco president H. M. Griffith said Thursday.

He told the Commons finance committee that the American partners in the Wabush development are deterred by the reduction in tax incentives for mining developments proposed in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's white paper on Income Tax Act revision.

Stelco owns a 25.6-per-cent interest in the Wabush mines and iron ore pellets plant near Sept Iles, Que. Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. owns 16.4 per cent, and the remaining 58 per cent is owned mainly by U.S. steelmakers.

Griffiths said Stelco wants to expand its share of the Wabush iron ore output to about 9,000,000 tons from 6,000,000 but Stelco's American partners are unwilling to participate. They believe the profitability of the necessary investment will be insufficient if the white paper proposals are put into effect without change.

CHEAPER FROM U.S.

N. J. Brown, vice-president and comptroller of Stelco, said the white paper reduces tax incentives for iron ore mining to about one-sixth their present worth. He promised to give the committee figures later on the actual worth of the present incentives in Stelco tax savings.

D. S. Holbrook, chairman and president of The Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said reducing the mining incentives will make it more attractive for his firm to imort iron ore from the United States than to mine it in Canada.

Griffith said that with new, larger bulk ore vessels, imports of higher grade iron ore from South America, Africa and even Australia would be competitive with Canadian ores, which are of low grade and have to be partly processed before shipment in pellet form.

Ottawa's Balance Tumbles

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's bank balance took another tumble in the past week under the pressure of buying up a flow of foreign currency into Canada.

The federal cash, which topped $1,000,000,000 a few weeks ago fell by $223,000,000 to $424,000,000 in the week to Wednesday. The previous week, $274,000,000 drained out of the government bank accounts.

During a heavy inward flow of U.S. dollars and other foreign currencies, attracted by relatively high interest rates or speculative investments, the government has to replenish its exchange fund account.

Funds from the exchange account are used to buy up excess foreign currency, which is invested in U.S. government securities. The action is necessary to keep the Canadian dollar within the upper limit of its pegged value between 91.5 and 93.5 cents in terms of U.S. funds.

Ottawa Will Control Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has taken steps to enforce a long-standing voluntary arrangement whereby Canada is split into markets for domestic and imported oil.

Energy Minister J. J. Greene Thursday revived a dormant section of law that enables the National Energy Board to keep oil imports out of markets west of the Ottawa Valley.

Answering long-standing complaints from major oil companies, Mr. Greene announced the steps to protect the Ontario petroleum market—Canada's biggest—from periodic invasions of low-priced imported gasoline.

Big oil companies, with Ontario refineries to handle piped crude oil from western Canada, had complained that cheap imports kept prices so low that they were discouraged from expanding Ontario refining capacity. Western suppliers—often the same international companies—echoed the complaint.

Thurday's move, generally welcomed by Opposition MPs, is based on policies established a decade ago.

TO STIMULATE OUTPUT

The so-called National Oil Policy of 1961, designed in part to stimulate production by foreign-dominated companies in Western Canada, assigned Canada west of the Ottawa-Valley counties of Ontario to domestic products.

The policy also was designed to mesh with United States markets. Western Canadian crude was piped into markets west of the Rocky Mountains and into the U.S. Middle West.

A then-secret 1967 agreement between the U.S. and Canadian governments set limits on Canadian imports east of the Rockies.

Compliance with Canada's 1961 split-market policy and the 1967 U.S.-Canada agreement were left on a largly voluntary basis. Many of the producing, refining, exporting and importing firms involved in the policies were the same international companies.

In recent years, however, Canadian crude piped into the United States had been exceeding the agreed limits. Similarly, eastern Canadian importers were leaking low-priced gasoline into the Ontario market.

Last year, Canada was producing about 1,300,000 barrels of oil a day — well under capacity with about half of it exported. Imports into eastern Canada filled up the slack in total national consumption of about 1,400,000 barrels a day.

There is persistent agitation from some independent Canadian producers to extend pipelines and expand the market for domestic oil into Eastern Canada.

Hovering over all were the discoveries last year of massive oil deposits in Alaska—which some feared might supplant Canadian exports to the United States—and the prospect of finding oil under the ocean off eastern Canada, replacing imports in that area.

ANGLICAN CLERGY of the diocese of British Columbia file into Christ Church Cathedral Thursday night to take part in the Ascension Day consecration of the new Bishop of British Columbia, Frederick Roy Gartrell, formerly of Ottawa.

Anglicans Ring Out a Welcome As Their New Bishop Installed

Victoria's Christ Church Cathedral was filled almost to overflow Thursday night as Very Rev. Fredederick Roy Gartrell, formerly of Ottawa, was installed as the eighth Anglican Bishop of British Columbia.

Following shouts of "welcome, welcome" from the choir and congregation, which ended in a fanfare of trumpets, Gartrell said:

"Some of my very oldest friends are in the congregation. My youngest son is here, my daughter, my wife and my mother.

"Pray for me, pray for the diocese. Pray for your parish that God may continue to richly bless us."

He then gave his blessing.

Archbishop Godfrey Gower of New Westminster, Metropolitan of B.C., presided at the eucharist and acted as chief consecrator in the impressive centuries-old ceremony, which saw Gartrell succeed Bishop John Ogle Anderson, who died last November, seven months after his installation.

Dean Brian Whitlow, of Christ Church Cathedral, presided over the induction and installation of Gartrell, following the traditional welcoming by himself and the clerical and lay secretaries.

Immediately following the impressive Ascension Day ceremony in the cathedral, the new bishop was welcomed in a reception in the Cathedral Hall.

Gartrell, former dean and rector of Ottawa Cathedral, was born in Stoney Creek, Ont., in 1917. Graduating with a bachelor of arts degree from McMaster University in 1935, he attended Wycliffe College, University of Toronto, where he received a degree in theology in 1938.

He received his bachelor of divinity in 1944 and received an honorary doctorate in divinity in 1962.

Ordained deacon in 1938 and priest in 1939, Gartrell was curate at St. James, Montreal, from 1938 to 1940. He became incumbent of Noranda from 1940 to 1944, curate of St. Paul's, Toronto, from 1944 to 1945 and rector of St. George's, Winnipeg, from 1945 until 1962, when he became dean at Ottawa. He was elected to his present position Feb. 6 of this year.

GIRL REGAINS SIGHT, 'MEDICAL PHENOMENON'

TIPTON, Ind. (UPI) — March 7, Ann Turner, 15, stared at the solar eclipse and was blinded. Her doctor said her eyes showed burn inflammation and scars, and she probably never would regain her sight.

Today she can see again.

Dr. Samuel Thompson, a Marion eye specialist who first examined Ann after the eclipse, said she had experienced a "medical phenomenon."

When Thompson first looked at her eyes, he said, they showed burn inflamation and scars. They still have some scars, but Ann now has normal vision, Thompson said, although he will examine her periodically for the next year.

Thompson said the girl lost her sight from staring directly at the solar eclipse March 7, when the moon passed in front of the sun, darkening the skies at midday. Doctors warn against staring at such phenomena, because of the danger to eyesight.

Wednesday, one day short of two months after she watched the eclipse, Ann cried: "I can see, I can see!" her mother hurried into the room and found her with her face buried in her hands, weeping.

"I believe it was a miracle, through the doctor or by natural means," said Ann's mother, Mrs. Coy Turner. "It still has the touch of God's hand in it."

Ann had been continuing her education at home. Wednesday night, her tutor, Mrs. Donna Renie, came for their usual session. Ann said to her: "What a pretty blouse you are wearing."

Ann will return to school Monday. Her only restriction is to avoid bright sunlight.

"I knew God wouldn't let me down," she said.

Few Dutch Strike

PARIS (Reuters) — Strikes cost The Netherlands 10,000 working days in 1969, the fewest of any country in Western Europe, figures issued by the French labor ministry show. Italy lost 20,000,000 days. France lost 2,200,000, compared with 150,000,000 in 1968, the year of the student riots.

MP Raps MacEachen

OTTAWA (CP) — Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) told the Commons Thursday high unemployment among youth leads to "alienation from the government and the country we live in."

The 24-year-old MP said in an adjournment debate that Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen should say what he plans to do to deal with the problem.

Charles Caccia (L—Toronto Davenport), parliamentary secretary to Mr. MacEachen, said the manpower department provides counselling at 55 universities and colleges.

Greater Freedom of Choice In School Operation Urged

Teachers and students should have a bigger say about what is taught and learned in today's schools, the director of instruction for the Greater Victoria school board said Thursday.

Dr. John Wiems, speaking to a Rotary club luncheon, said the greatest problem facing education today is alienation and the best way to combat it is to provide greater freedom of choice for those directly concerned with the operation of a school.

He said a rigid curriculum developed by government cannot be expected to work.

"Freedom must be given to people in the schools to develop a curriculum as the need arises."

FREEDOM

"One thing that depresses me about today's schools is that they are all the same. In our society we seem to believe in freedom of choice everywhere but in the schools. Why don't we give people in the school system a better freedom of choice?"

Wiems said he is also worried about the purpose of the school system and what it is trying to accomplish.

"I have tried many times to get people to explain to me what schools are for, and in many cases, after a half an hour, they give up."

He said young people are especially concerned with the purpose of the education they are told they must have and that he has received many letters from students wanting to get involved and find out.

"Teachers and parents try to tell children what school is all about and parents and children try to tell teachers how to teach. The only time teachers and trustees get together is when there's trouble and that usually concerns how much they're getting paid.

"The only time parents and teachers get together is when little Johnny has done something wrong."

"We have to get all the groups together — students, teachers, trustees and administrators — and solve some of our problems. So far we haven't done it."

Informers Get Paid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government says it may in some cases, pay an informer more than $50,000 in its drive to crack illegal drug supply conspiracies. John Ingersoll told of the high price of information to a House of Reperesentatives appropirations subcommittee considering a $439,000 "informers fund" request for his bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs. Ingersoll testified last March. The transcript was made public today.

No Taxes Seen For Swim Pool

DUNCAN — Duncan's Centennial Committee proposes to go ahead with a swimming pool for the city's 1971 centennial project with no further expense to taxpayers.

The adoption of the "covered or uncovered" swimming pool will be dependent upon North Cowichan-Southend co-operation with the city, Ald. Martin Lukaitis, chairman of the city's centennial committee, said after an in-camera meeting.

Lukaitis explained that funds for the pool could come from: Op Rec, $80,000; city recreations funds, $32,000; centennial grant, $4,500; North Cowichan centennial grant, $12,000 and another $12,000 from North Cowichan.

He said city council approved, in committee, the proposed project because there would be no increase in taxes for the capital expenditure. The recreation budget of both municipalities would take care of the operating costs of the pool.

School Board Criticism Cooled

NORTH COWICHAN — Rick Richards, president of the North Cowichan Southend Ratepayers and Citizens Association, today backed off from his earlier criticism of the Cowichan school board.

"I no longer want to say anything against the school board," said Richards. "I want to see what they are going to do. I realize that co-operation between us is absolutely essential."

Richards had accused the school board of being undemocratic because they were scraping up $96,683 from previous referendums to carry out a building program costing $165,183 after ratepayers had turned down a $213,000 building referendum.

Richards said when he made the accusation he was not speaking as a representative of his assocation but for irate taxpayers.

APPROVED

Support for the school board in their attempt to secure funds for classroom, construction and co-operation on other local issues was approved by representatives from five ratepayers' groups in North Cowichan at a joint executive meeting Monday evening.

Richards said the decision was not unanimous and that he, along with two others, went to complain about the board's move to G. Phillipson, assistant superintendent or education for the department of education Wednesday.

He said that trustees are invited to the next meeting of the ratepayers on May 21 at 7:30 p.m.

Arena Debenture Fully Subscribed

LAKE COWICHAN — Debentures for $250,000 for the Lake Cowichan skating and curling arena have been fully subscribed to by local residents.

Alex Smith, chairman of the Cowichan Valley Regional District board, announced that orders for debentures representing the second offering of $142,000 will be accepted in the near future.

"The arena project is well under way, thanks to the tremendous voluntary support of local citizens, business and industry, and building will commerce shortly," Smith said.

Proceed from the Lake Cowichan Kinsmen Club bingo to be held at Mesachie Lake ball park on Wednesday at 7 p.m. will be turned over to the new arena complex.

The Kiwanis and Spade Clubs of the village are sponsoring a walkathon on June 14 with proceeds going to the project.

'Real Favor' To Spread Beauty

DUNCAN — "There is so much sadness in the world that anybody who can study nature and spread beauty is doing us a real favor," retired architect Thornton Sharp said as he opened Crofton Art Group's 10th annual art show Wednesday.

On display, in the event sponsored by Duncan Kinettes, were 95 paintings in acrylics, oils, pastels and water colors. Samples of pottery and ceramic were also displayed.

Proceeds will go toward the seven-acre Art Mann Park at Quamichan Lake, Duncan. The park was inititated five years ago by the Duncan Kinettes and Kinsmen clubs.

Bruins Made It Look Easy Despite Hall's Brilliance

Bill WALKER

The past is in the grave, although its ghost haunts us. Robert Browning, I do believe. And haunt us it does.

There was the item last month that the Harlem Globetrotters had played their 10,000th game. It olso marked the occasion of their 9,678th victory. They have not lost in eight years.

It's different now than it was back when. It's a show today, fun and games. People like basketball. People like to laugh. The Trotters supply both ingredients.

It was the late Abe Saperstein who took the Trotters out of a ballroom in Chicago in the twenties to make room for roller skating. They never got back. They never wanted to. They have been on the road ever since.

This was the first recognized breakthrough of black athletes into a major sport, outside of boxing. Professional basketball had bridged the gap. Abe Saperstein had jumped the color bar.

The Trotters are comedians now. Basketball players, too, but showmen first and foremost. They can command their own price. They are celebrities, they perform before royalty and presidents. They stay in the best places. They are first class.

But it wasn't always thus. When the Trotters first stopped by here, they were on a peanut butter and jam diet. They played one-night stands. They played in Vancouver, and Victoria, and Duncan, and Ladysmith, if they could get a game. They would play anywhere. It was that kind of a season every year. They didn't sleep in hotels in some towns. They weren't welcome. So they would sleep in their car, all six of them or, with the manager, maybe seven. In a big town, perhaps another sub, but rarely. Their budget wouldn't allow for frills.

They would play to win, to the crowd, and both. It was usually the latter, when they came to Victoria. They were good, very good, and Victoria was just fair. That was at first. But Victoria basketball improved. So did the Trotters, of course. But to Victoria there was one creed:

"Beat the Trotters. This was an accepted article of faith.

Dave Nicol was manager of the Dominoes then. He ran a hard-nosed club, probably the best-ever city team in that first season after the war, 1946.

This was the era of Saturday night basketball. Sure, there were other things to do. But not many, and in sport the Dominoes were kings. Every weekend there was a match-up with a visiting squad, usually from the States. The late Chuck Durgan didn't bring losers when he brought visitors here from Seattle. He brought stars, some by another name because their college eligibility would be threatened. But it was all-star stuff. Nothing less. This is what the Dominoes were weaned on.

One of the season's highlights was the Trotter visit. In 1946, it most certainly was. The Dominoes weren't about to be a part of any show. It wasn't in their makeup. Oh, if they got behind far enough, they might unbend a little. But not until they had met their match. They would test the Trotters.

The Trotters had been warned. They had been here before. They knew their task. They had a reputation, too. Duke Cumberland—remember him? He was a Globetrotter in those days. Price? Here was another. And Hudson, and Moore and Philps. They were later to play, and beat, the U.S. College All-Stars in an exhibition series that same season.

But not this night. They were to meet their comeuppance. The Dominoes came out shooting, and went home tired, but happy. They had defeated their esteemed visitors, 57-44. A low score by today's standards, but respectable then. The margin of difference was the measure of importance.

Of course the Dominoes were pretty good. They had won the Canadian championship before the war. Pat Bay had carried on the good name during hostilities. And the Dominoes were to win the championship again that spring. Many of the players went on to a brief pro career with Vancouver. True, the Hornets were ill-fated, but only because they were before their time.

Baker had a ripple with the pros in the early stages of U.S. development and was the only non-American to play on the U.S. team which toured Euorpe with the Trotters. But then it was only minor box office compared to what is pro basketball today. Still, the talent was major league. There were few better. The Trotters, if not No. 1, weren't that far behind the best. And by the same standards, Victoria basketball belonged in that grouping.

But that was in 1946.

This year the city wasn't even represented in the Canadian Senior A men's playdowns. Why?

And there was excellent basketball in town, in league action, and at Uvic. The talent abounds, although there may be cause for concern in the development program leading to teams of national stature.

What about it, men?

Perhaps that ghost is only trying to tell us something.

Boston's Ninth Straight Establishes Playoff Mark

BOSTON (CP)—A Stanley Cup victory celebration Sunday appeared certain for Boston Bruins after they humiliated St. Louis Blues for the third consecutive time in their best-of-seven final Thursday night.

The Bruins even helped the Blues score their lone goal in the 4-1 Boston victory that was highlighted by the home team's puck handling and the acrobatics of St. Louis goaltender Glenn Hall.

The rest of the contest gave the 14,835 fans little to get excited about as the Bruins played only well enough to fashion the three-goal margin, while the Blues failed to produce any semblance of an offence.

"One more to go," was the confident comment by right winger Wayne Cashman, who scored two Boston goals in the third period.

"This team has really jelled," said John McKenzie, who scored the winning goal in the opening period. "When you have 19 guys going well, it's easy."

It appeared as though the Bruins could have easily scored three or four more goals despite the goaltending of Hall, who handled 46 shots.

Boston's ability to control the puck and their tendency not to press was best displayed in the third period when Derek Sanderson raced into the Blues' zone after a loose puck while the Bruins were a man short.

Centre Frank St. Marseille carried the puck into the Boston zone and moved to the right of goaltender Gerry Cheevers in an attempt to get around defenceman Bobby Orr.

Infected Hand Didn't Deter Hall

The Bruins dominated the play from there on and had the winning goal scored before the end of the period.

Johnny Bucyk collected the Bruins' 14th powerplay of the playoffs to tie the game and McKenzie scored the winner.

Bucyk's goal came after Hall sprawled on the goal crease to stop a hard shot from Phil Esposito and the puck danced loose as Bucyk swooped in and fired it into the net.

An almost identical shot from the left wing beat Hall for the Bruins third goal and Cashman, who scored it, got his second of the night by picking up the puck behind the St. Louis net, coming around to the front and banging it several times before getting it over Hall.

Hall, who did not play in the first two games of the series, worked despite an infected hand.

LIKES TO PLAY

"Glenn volunteered to play," said Blues' coach Scotty Bowman. "He likes to play on the road and especially in Boston. And I've never seen him play better. He made the game."

Bowman made several changes in his lineup. With veteran Al Arbour and Bill McCreary sidelined with injuries, Norm Dennis and Ron Anderson, who have seen little playoff action, took their places.

"I wanted to play Anderson and Dennis," Bowman said. "They've been working out for the last couple of weeks and they deserve a chance to play. I also wanted to get some bigger men in there."

Defencemen Ray Fortin and Billy Plager also got more ice time with Arbour and Barclay Plager out with injuries.

Barclay Plager, oldest of the defencemen brothers, suffered a rib separation in the first game of the series and Arbour is still nursing a shoulder injury suffered in the quarter-finals.

Bowman continued assigning his left wingers to shadow Orr, the high scoring defenceman whose spectacular rushes start many of the Boston scoring plays.

Jim Roberts again was the most conspicuous of the Orr shadows and took the end of Orr's stick in his ribs and an elbow in the face at least once.

MORE FOR ORR

BOSTON (CP) — Boston Bruins defenceman Bobby Orr added further laurels to an already illustrious National Hockey League season today when he was named winner of both the Hart Memorial and James Norris trophies.

Two other award winners, announced by the NHL, were Chicago Black Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito, who won the Calder Memorial Trophy as "Rookie-of-the-Year" and veteran St. Louis Blues centre Phil Goyette who received the Lady Byng Trophy.

The Lady Byng is for the player "adjudged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct, combined with a high standard of playing ability.

Orr, who during the regular season became the first defenceman ever to win the Art Ross Trophy as scoring champion, thus becomes only the second player to win three individual awards in one season.

Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks twice won the Ross, Hart and Lady Byng awards in the same season — 1966-67 and 1967-68.

SECRET OF WINNING

Driver Walter Marks prepares to place sunglasses on pacer Corn Maid, which had been winless in eight starts at Liberty Bell Park in Philadelphia because of tendency to quit when reaching bright lights of homestretch. Limping Hawk Fires 71; Trails Beman by Three HOUSTON (AP)—He came stumping down the fairway on once-shattered legs, limping badly on an injured left knee, the familiar white cap a sign-post out of the past.

Ben Hogan was back, briefly, perhaps, but back at competitive golf.

And the fabled Texas Hawk who dominated another era of golf received an ovation at every green from the gallery that came to study the moves of the master who won 10 major championships, including four United States open titles.

He responded with a par 71, a highly respectable score on the treacherous Champions Golf Club course, and trailed leader Deane Beman by just three strokes going into today's second round of the $115,000 Houston champions international invitational golf tournament.

It was the first competitive appearance in almost three years for the man who swept three major championships—the U.S. and British Opens and the Masters—in 1953.

'LITTLE NERVOUS'

"I must admit I was a little nervous," said Hogan, long reputed to have nerves to match his steel-gray eyes. But he made some putts when he had to—putting woes forced him into a semi-retirement several years ago—and really had trouble only on the sixth hole, on which he went two over par.

The 32-year-old Beman, who had an outstanding amateur record before turning professional only three years ago, played early in the day, posted his 68, then sat back and watched it stand up for the lead.

He held a one-stroke margin over Gibby Gilbert, who had only the marshals as a gallery, Australian Bruce Crampton and Bert Greene, tied at 69.

Leading money winner Lee Trevino headed a group at 70. The others were Dale Douglass, Johnny Pott, Tommy Aaron, Gene Littler and Dave Hill.

Al Balding and George Knudson, both of Toronto, shot 75's.

"No, I'm not satisfied," the 50-year-old Hogan said. "I'm never satisfied.

"It might have been better if I didn't do a couple of stupid things. I hit a couple of children's shots."

WITH SOCCER ROYALS

O'Keefe Players Get Most Berths

For the time being, the new Victoria Royals of the Western Canada Soccer League will read like "who's who" with Victoria O'Keefes of the Pacific Coast League.

Royals make their debut Sunday in Nanaimo, facing Newcastle United of the English League's first division. The Caledonia Park match starts at 2 p.m.

Royals and the touring "Magpies" will meet again next Saturday in Victoria's Royal Athletic Park.

Although Royals expect to bolster their lineup with Old Country players, it will be virtually an all-O'Keefe team that meets Newcastle in Nanaimo.

The major exception will be Brian Hughes, veteran Welsh international who has been signed as Royals' playing-coach.

Thirteen members of O'Keefes, who lost to Vancouver Columbia in the Coast League championship playoff, have been designated to dress Sunday.

Also dressing are Ash Valdal, Peter Wheaton, Jim Irvine and spare goaltender Graham Lee.

Valdal started the season with O'Keefes but was forced to drop out because of teaching commitments.

Wheaton and Irvine, who formerly played for the Coast League entry, has been campaigning with Oak Bay in the District League's first division.

Lee also played in the District League with Gorge Molsons.

MATCH SATURDAY

It will be a busy weekend for most of the O'Keefes because the Coast Leaguers will also tackle an all-star squad from the District League in an exhibition match Saturday at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

The day has been designated "Wilf Sadler Appreciation Day" in honor of the director of the Lower Juvenile Association who has done so much to support soccer in Victoria.

All juvenile players will be admitted free to the match, courtesy of the Evening Optimist Club.

USHER AWAY SO TIGERS MUST PAY

DETROIT (UPI) — A Wayne County circuit court jury ruled Thursday the Detroit Tigers must pay $40,000 to a fan who was socked in the nose by another fan during the opening day game of the 1965 season.

The jury awarded the damages to Paul Foy, 60, after witnesses said there was no usher present during 25 minutes when a squabble over blocking the view resulted in a fight.

The award included $30,000 for Foy's broken nose and $10,000 to Foy's wife for loss of consortium.

Bullen Spins Shutout For Molson's Squad

Three Denford Electric errors and the four-hit shutout pitching of Glen Bullen added up to a 4-0 victory for Molsons in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Thursday at Central Park.

Molson runners took advantage of two of the errors as well as a wild pitch to collect three of their runs.

Bullen, who picked up the first two Molson victories in relief, struck out 10 batters and didn't allow a runner past second base in his first starting assignment and third victory.

The league-leading Molsons have allowed only one run in three games and nine hits in 21 innings.

In a game scheduled for Wednesday, Denford picked up a win when Lake Cowichan defaulted after showing up with only eight players.

WARNING SOUNDED . . . . . FOR WINTER ATHLETES

Avery Holding 'Bomb?'

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Avery Brundage, the American president of the International Olympic Committee, has warned winter sports athletes and fans that he has "an atomic bomb" ready to explode next week.

Skiing and hockey will be the subject of an announcement, he indicated. Brundage has waged a running fight for many years over increasing commercialism in Olympic sport.

His words Thursday left many persons wondering whether the IOC at its meeting here next week will get around to deciding on the sites for the 1976 Summer and Winter Olympics. Voting on both sites is scheduled for Tuesday night.

Brundage warned: "It is possible that the site for the Winter Games may not be decided here because of these problems. We shall have to wait and see."

"Another question that will come up is a move to expel the South African National Olympic Committee," Brundage said.

"The Supreme Council for African Sport is going to spell out its case against South Africa. The South Africans will reply and then a vote will be taken."

The South Africans have been barred from competing in the last two Olympics. But the national committee still is recognized.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Many Choices For Anglers This Weekend

By STEWART LANG

Almost any fishing spot on Vancouver Island, be it salt or fresh water, could be tried this weekend with good chances of success.

First, to salmon fishing . . .

In the southern portion of Saanich Inlet a large quantity of spring salmon seem to be feeding on herring.

May Hall reports that any depth or selection of lure seems to produce in the vicinities of Goldstream Island, Chesterfield Rock and Misery Bay.

Further north in the Inlet, bluebacks are ranging from three to three and a half pounds while springs have been caught up to 20 pounds.

Some limit catches of blues have been taken offshore at Whiskey Point using four to six ounces of weight and small spoons. Another spot that has produced blues, together with some jack springs, is in deep water off McKenzie Bay.

Main spring returns are coming from Indian and Coles Bays, to a lesser degree near the entrance to Tod Inlet, and very deep near Deep Hole and Stone House.

Blues and big springs supply the most action off Oak Bay around Trial, Chain and Chatham Islands for those fishing with 75 to 100 feet of line and from six to 16 ounces of weight.

Harry Southin boated a 26-pounder near one of these areas, but he didn't say exactly where.

Fishermen using strip and anchovies off the kelp bed near the Race area of Pedder Bay have been coming back with springs ranging from six to 20 pounds.

Other good catches have been reported from the Beechey Head section of Becher Bay.

Up-Islanders are catching springs and blues off the far side of Tent Island and in Sansum Narrows near Duncan and limits of blues near Five Fingers and Northwest Bay as well as south of Hornby Island.

Near Campbell River, springs are being landed in Duncan Bay but the main concentration of blues is still north in Seymour Narrows and Johnstone Strait.

And, for the trout angler . . .

Cowichan River has been rated as good near the White Bridge and up into its tributary — Holt Creek.

Various creek mouths in Cowichan Lake have also been yielding some bountiful harvests.

Near Nanaimo, all the lower lakes are producing and Bommerang Lake has figured prominantly among the local hotspots.

Both casting and fly-fishing have produced good results near the powerhouse on Great Central Lake and trout up to three pounds are not uncommon in Sproat Lake.

Fair returns are reported near Courtenay, with access only on weekends to Willimar, Wolf, Regan, Anderson and Blue Grouse lakes.

Trolling and fly-fishing seem to work equally well near Campbell River, with action hot in both Upper and Lower Campbell as well as Buttle Lakes.

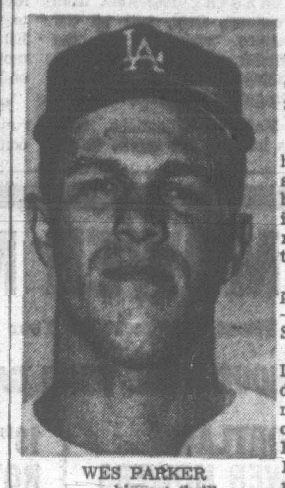
Wes' Cycle Wheels Dodgers Past Mets

By The Associated Press



WES PARKER
. . . biggest thrill

Wes Parker realized a baseball ambition that has been nagging him for two years when he hit for the cycle Thursday night to spark Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-4 10-inning victory over the world champion New York Mets.

After smacking a double, homer and single earlier, the slick-fielding Los Angeles first baseman slammed a tie-breaking two-run triple in the 10th inning as the Dodgers erupted for three runs.

The setback left the second-place Mets with a 13-13 record —only 7-13 in games Tom Seaver hasn't started.

Elsewhere in the National League, red-hot Cincinnati Reds downed Chicago Cubs 5-2, Montreal Expos trounced San Francisco Giants 15-8, San Diego Padres trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 8-2 and Pittsburgh Pirates beat Houston Astros 9-5. Atlanta and St. Louis weren't scheduled.

Parker called his hitting display "about the biggest thrill I've ever had in baseball."

"I've thought about this ever since I just missed doing it against Cincinnati two years ago," Parker disclosed. "I had a single, double and triple and my last at-bat I missed a home run by a foot. The outfielder—I don't remember who it was—caught it leaping against the wall."

Ted Sizemore reached first on an error to open the 10th, Willie Davis beat out a bunt, Sizemore stole third and Von Joshua struck out before Parker walloped his triple far over the head of the Mets centre fielder Tommie Agee.

Colwood Inn Win Protested By Gilmours

Colwood Inn rallied with a four-run outburst in the second inning Thursday evening to defeat Gilmour Construction 10-6 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League encounter at Heywood Avenue Park.

Gilmour lodged a protest in the top of the seventh inning over the hurling style of Jack Lundquist; who replaced first relief pitcher Al Graham in the top of the fifth. Graham relieved started George Barker in the top of the third.

Lundquist allegedly failed to keep both feet on the rubber.

Big Fivepin Game

Wasn't Going to Stop for Anything

"I was just trying to hit the ball in the air for a sacrifice fly to get the lead run home," Parker said. "When I saw it go over Agee's head I wasn't going to stop for anything or anybody until I reached third base."

Parker tied the score 1-1 with a seventh-inning homer off starter Ray Sadecki, triggering a four-run uprising. After Billy Grabarkewitz doubled, Tug McGraw relieved but Jeff Torborg got a double when left fielder Cleon Jones failed to catch his long drive. The other runs came across on a single by Maury Wills and Willie Davis' double.

The Mets tied it with three in the eighth against relief pitcher Jim Brewer, unscored upon previously this season. Two runs scored when right fielder Joshua dropped a two-out fly ball with the bases loaded.

TIES STREAK RECORD

Agee's leadoff single in the first inning extended his hitting streak to 18 games, tying the club mark set by Frank Thomas in 1962, the Mets' first year.

The Reds increased their winning streak to eight games and sent the Cubs to their sixth straight defeat and first at home after 10 triumphs.

In the American League, they may be repeating to Moe Drabowsky: It's never over until the last man is out.

Drabowsky and his Kansas City Royals mates figured they had finally beaten Baltimore Orioles, but couldn't get the last out Thursday night.

Frank Robinson socked a two-out, three-run homer off reliever Drabowsky's first pitch to give the Orioles a dramatic 7-6 victory, their 17th straight over the Royals.

The last and only time the expansion Royals beat Baltimore was in the first meeting last year.

"Robinson's homer was disturbing, but I should've retired one of the other batters and not let that big guy get up there," said Drabowsky, who issued walks to pinch hitters Terry Crowley and Merv Rettemund before Robinson's shot.

"Robinson got his 2,300th hit off me last month," recalls Drabowsky, who helped the Orioles beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1966 World Series.

In other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers bounced Boston Red Sox 5-1 behind Denny Walton's hitting; Minnesota Twins shut off a late rally by Detroit to beat the Tigers 9-6; Roy White's two homers powered New York Yankees over Oakland Athletics 7-3 and California Angels crushed Washington Senators 8-0.

FOUR FORMER QUEENS SEEKING TENPIN TITLE

Earlier this week a story on these pages said that no former women's tenpin champions had qualified this season for Sunday's seventh annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Somebody down here got his signals crossed because four former tenpin queens — Leona Peterson, Muriel Dodsworth, Peggy Parsons and Ollie Rutledge — earned rolloff berths by winning weekly awards in the 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Those four and 22 other winners of weekly awards are eligible to shoot for the women's tenpin crown at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Mayfair Lanes.

The men's tenpin rolloff will also be at Mayfair at the same time and men's and women's fivepin rolloffs will start one hour earlier at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Each of the four rolloff winners will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Daily Times will receive a bonus prize of $100.

There's No Middlesex But County Team Real

By STEVE HUME

Officially, it's the Middlesex County representative rugby side.

Politically speaking, on the other hand, it's an historical anachronism — chiefly because the county of Middlesex no longer exists.

Nevertheless, when the Middlesex reps are selected they are chosen from more than 200 rugby teams; only qualifications being that they play for clubs established within what used to be the ancient boundaries of Middlesex County.

Confusing?

Actually, what happened to Middlesex was that the City of London swallowed it up; but that's neither here nor there.

Middlesex may be a memory but the rugby players are real flesh and blood — as Victoria's Crimson Tide will discover when they clash with the touring team at Royal Athletic Park Monday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m.

And they should provide fans with a lively exhibition of rugby talent. The Middlesex County clubs have long been among the most powerful in the British Isles.

THREE INVITATIONALS

And the calibre of those clubs is reflected in the calibre of the individuals on tour. The touring side includes three Welsh internationals, two international trialists, and a British Universities player from Trinidad.

Leading the already impressive line-up is Wales' John Williams, generally conceded to be the finest fullback in rugby today. He has toured internationally with his country twice, has been capped by the Welsh 12 times, and also held the British Junior Tennis championship in 1966.

City Youngsters Top Fivepin List

A girls' team from Town and Country Lanes in Victoria learned Thursday that they had captured the Jets (under-nine) title in the Youth Bowling Congress provincial five-pin championships.

Results from games in 17 British Columbia centres were mailed to competition headquarters in Vancouver.

Town and Country's five-member team totaled 1,990 to down Old Orchard Lanes of Burnaby by 31 points.

Leach Paces Bomber Win

EDMONTON — Reg Leach scored three goals as Flin Flon Bombers took a 4-0 lead and hung on for a 4-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings Thursday in the third game of the best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League final.

Bombers, who lead the series 3-0, scored three goals in the first and Leach made it 4-0 early in the second. Edmonton scored once in the second period and twice in the final period.

Gun Club Stages Island Track Meet

The scattergun season will open with a bang this weekend.

The Vancouver Island open trap championships, a Pacific International Trapshooting Association registered meet, is the first major bird-breaking event of the summer season at the Victoria Gun Club.

Shooting will get under way at 9 a.m. Saturday and wind up Sunday. A calcutta, to be shot Sunday, will be drawn Saturday evening at the Gun Club banquet in the Victoria Curling Club.

Events will include 16-yard singles, handicap singles and doubles. High overall gun, the major award, will be determined on results after shooting at 450 birds.

New Sidney Team To Play Saturday

Sidney Sweet Hearts, newest team in the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League will play a pair of exhibition games Saturday at Heywood Avenue Park.

They will meet Tillicums, another league team, at 3 p.m. and have also slated a game at 6 against Jubilettes, a group of student nurses, who will receive proceeds from the second game to help pay costs of recreational equipment.

SOCCER COMMISSION LEANS TO DEMOCRACY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Soccer Commission, governing body of all soccer in the province, will become an elected body Saturday, after almost 40 years as one appointed by the Canadian Soccer Football Association.

Retiring commission chairman Bill Stirling said Thursday the test of the change will be in the years to come.

"I don't know if an elected body can or will give any better governing than before," he said.

Three members will be elected for three-year terms, three for two years and another three for one year.

PORTLAND CAR TO RUN SUNDAY

Wheelstand Dragster

Richard Schroeder's wheelstanding 1969 AMX from Portland, Ore., will be the feature performer at the official opening of the drag-racing season at Van Isle Dragways on Sunday.

Major modifications, such as locating the engine in the rear and injecting nitro-methane fuel, enable the car to reach speeds in excess of 100 miles-per-hour while moving down the quarter-mile on its rear wheels.

In addition to the exhibition runs by Schroeder, regular competition will be held stock eliminator, late-model super-stock, modified and competition eliminator brackets.

Gates open at 11 a.m. Saturday for time trials and grudge racing. On Sunday gates will open at 9 a.m. and eliminations are slated for 1:30 p.m.

Crescent Rock Race a Pre-Swiftsure Appetizer

PULLING OUT as manager-coach of Saskatoon Blades of Western Canada Junior Hockey League is George Agar, who once coached a professional team in Victoria. Agar directed Blades for past seven years and has "no immediate plans" for his future.

Skippers of ocean-going yachts at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club are stowing extra safety gear aboard and preparing for the race which has become known as a pre-Swiftsure appetizer.

The overnight, 50-mile race has a 24-hour limit and will take the boats across to Crescent Rock, 12 miles west of Port Angles, and back to finish line in the vicinity of Oak Bay Marina.

With Swiftsure slated for Saturday, May 30 this is the last warm-up of any real size in which to test crews and equipment and, if scuttlebut is any indication, watchers on shore will see a sizeable fleet set out into the Strait.

The emphasis will be on pomp and ceremony at the Canadian Forces Sailing Association's clubhouse Sunday.

Members and guests will gather on the lawns at 1:30 p.m. for the flag-raising ceremony which precedes the sail-past scheduled for 2 p.m.

This year CFSA's largest yacht, the navy ketch HMCS Oriole, will do the honors and have Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter aboard to take the salute. Among others on board the Swiftsure and Victoria-Maui veteran will be Commodore, R. V. Henning, Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Henning, Esquimalt's Mayor Arthur Young and Mrs. Young.

Unlike many yacht clubs, CFSA makes a point of scorning the more convenient motor and actually makes the sail-past under canvas — no mean feat when the winds are brisk and the boats, varying from dinghies to cruising yachts, must keep station or spoil the effect.

Top-flight Canadian yachtsmen are already sharpening their strategy and training for the Pan-Am Games, to be raced in South America at Cal, Columbia, from July 28 to Aug. 4, 1971.

Manager of the Canadian team, Jack Balmer of Vancouver has set trial dates for the three classes of boats to be represented.

Sail-offs in Olympic Finns will be held at Oakville, Ont. from Oct 2 to 4 this year while similar ones in Snipes will be staged at Kingston, Aug. 29 to Sept. 4. Lightning sail-offs will also be held in Ontario but the particular site has not yet been finalized. These will take place Sept. 6 to 8.

These trials are open to anyone who wants to put a boat and crew together but Balmer warns that entrants must be prepared to embark on a planned racing and training campaign before and after the trials, as well as the period leading to the Games.

Those interested in competing should write to the Pan-Am Committee, care of Canadian Yachting Association, Suite 305, 91 Yonge Street, Toronto 210.

Strong sou'westerlies, blowing between 20 and 30 knots, took their toll Wednesday when RVYC boats competed in the second race of A series at Cadboro Bay.

One of the first casualties was the committee boat which was rammed amidships by Ken Kidd's Por Gusto when she went out of control 30 seconds before she was due to start.

Bob Grundson's Owl was the first to finish in the Thunderbirds. Behind him were Rod McBride's Lamolo, Gordie Nickells' Redskin and Ian Stewart's Ahoo-Ya.

Art Works of Walter Phillips Important Cultural Canadiana

By ELIZABETH FORBES

There was a time, back in the days of the Great Depression, when Walter Phillips exchanged his woodcuts and watercolor paintings for food and clothing for his family and for the education of his children.

Forbes

Today, the smallest of those same woodcuts and paintings, if you could find any of them outside the family circle or private collectors' hands, would cost well over a hundred dollars to acquire.

In the space of little more than 30 years they have become important cultural Canadiana and W. J. Phillips, RCA, who died in Victoria in 1963, has gained international recognition, especially for his craftsmanship in the original color woodcut.

On Saturday, in connection with the 300th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company, a collection of Phillips woodcuts and paintings will go on display on the fourth floor of the local store.

Phillips' daughter, Mary Adamson, is going to assist in the opening in the absence of her mother, who is presently in England. The collection will be on display here throughout the month of May.

Until now there has been little opportunity to see a detailed exhibition of Phillips' work because in depression years they were scattered here, there and everywhere.

As Mrs. Adamson says, "I don't imagine there are many men who managed to support themselves and their families during those years by painting only. Yet, it's what my father did.

"We are very proud of that fact and we have many happy memories of those days."

Over coffee the other morning in her military history department office at University of Victoria, she told me a little of her father's life.

As a lad going to school in England he wanted to become an artist but an austere Methodist minister father refused to have anything to do with such flighty notions. If his son would not study for the ministry there would be no money for his education.

On the other hand, a mother who wrote poetry throughout her life and who had learned to love good paintings as a girl in her parents' home, encouraged young Phillips, in a quiet way, to paint if he wished.

It was hard going. He did sell his first watercolor when he was 14 to his headmaster. He also won prize money at school. This helped him to spend his summers studying art. But it was not enough.

In order to make more money for study, he went out to South Africa and worked at anything he could find to do, from digging in the diamond mines to writing for a newspaper.

At the end of five years he was back in England, little better off than when he left.

Soon after his return he was appointed art master at Bishop Woodsworth School in Salisbury, where he met his wife Gladys, who was one of his pupils.

They were married in Salisbury and their son John was born in that English town. It was in Salisbury, too, that Phillips held his first one-man show in 1911.

In the summer of 1913, the Phillips emigrated to Canada and "for no apparent reason" settled in Winnipeg, where they lived for the next 30 years.

Over those three decades Walter Phillips painted the western scene in all seasons from Lake of the Woods to the Pacific coast.

It was in Winnipeg that he became interested in etching and from there moved into color woodcuts.

He wrote a column, "Arts and Artists," for the Winnipeg Tribune and produced his authoritative work on the technique of the color woodcut, illustrations for school text books and also where he "swapped" his work for the amenities of living.

Mrs. Adamson says she and her three sisters and a brother remember him in those days as "a man who was passionately fond of color, who never tired of pointing to it in nature and who instilled in his young a knowledge of the trees, flowers and the birds."

They loved to sit and watch him as he worked. They posed for him and were paid at the rate of 10 cents a day for doing it.

In 1940 Walter Phillips became first professor emeritus at Banff School of Fine Arts where he remained for some years.

The family moved to Calgary and then to Banff. Finally, when failing sight struck the artist, they came to Victoria where Mrs. Phillips and Mary still live.

Phillips was blind for the last three years of his life.

Showing of his work in The Bay has been made possible through the zeal of one of the artist's admirers, John P. Crabb of Winnipeg, who set to work a few years ago to assemble and preserve whatever memorabilia he could find.

It's a part of his large collection that will be on display, a collection that Crabb plans to hold together and in time to dedicate, in some way, for future generations.

P.E.I. Expects Close Election

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Because of thinly-populated electoral districts in Prince Edward Island, a few hundred votes could mean victory or defeat for either of the two parties contesting Monday's election.

The sparse pluralities recorded in many districts in the 1966 election have prompted political leaders to urge supporters to get out and vote in this election—and to guard against spoiled ballots.

One vote gave the Conservative Kings 5th in the last election. A second seat was won by three votes and a third by five. Five other seats had pluralities of less than 100.

Both Premier Alex Campbell, leader of the Liberals, and Conservative Leader George Key, have been stressing the importance one or two votes could make in a district.

The campaign for this election, dull so far by P.E.I. standards, was gaining momentum today with both parties holding final rallies.

LEADS BANDS

Premier Campbell was to lead a cavalcade, accompanied by two bands, through every district of the province—which has a population of 110,000—covering about 300 miles before returning to Charlottetown where the Liberal rally will be held.

Mr. Key says his party doesn't have the funds to spend on such an extravaganza and his candidates will be canvassing door-to-door today before attending a rally in Summerside.

The leaders are scheduled to meet in a television debate Saturday night.

At party rallies Thursday night, both leaders spoke on the comprehensive development plan, the only major issue of the campaign.

The plan, signed with Ottawa last year, is billed as progress for the future by the Liberals, while the Conservatives say it will lead to depopulation and should be renegotiated.

The plan has provided about the only clear issue in the campaigning.

PRAIRIE PLANES NOT FOR WAR—GROOS

OTTAWA (CP) — David Groos (L—Victoria), parliamentary secretary to Defence Minister Leo Cadieux, assured the Commons Thursday pilots flying U.S. Air Force B-52s over Saskatchewan and Alberta are not being trained for the Vietnam war.

He said in an adjournment debate that completely different flight training techniques are used for Vietnam service.

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) had earlier said the pilots flying the planes were undoubtedly being trained for service in Vietnam.

Victoria Boy To Go East

School patrol boy Ted Stevens, 13, of 622 Grenville, will represent Victoria at the Canadian Automobile Association's annual school patrol jamboree in Ottawa, May 15 and 16.

Stevens, a student at Lampson Elementary, will join 11 other students from centres throughout the province to form a B.C. contingent. The B.C. group, sponsored by the B.C. Automobile Association will meet patrolers from all over Canada at the jamboree.

The youngsters will visit Parliament Buildings, the mint, and see a special performance of the RCMP musical ride.

Don't Get Sick!

B.C. has fewer nursing staff, per patient, than any other province in Canada.

B.C. also has the lowest percentage of government expenditure on hospitals of any province in Canada.

The Federal Government pays approximately half the cost of B.C.'s acute hospital care; the other half comes from 2% of the 5% Provincial Sales Tax.

Over the last eleven years, more than $100,000,000.00 was collected from the Sales Tax which was not used for hospital care.

Waiting lists for surgery and hospitalization continue to grow because of increases in population and continued shortages in facilities and staff — yet, the Provincial Minister of Health and Welfare has demanded hospitals cut back even further on services and staff.

The only way to end this crisis is to demand a Public Inquiry into hospital services. Remove the smokescreen of deception that surrounds hospital financing!

Don't leave it up to the politicians —
Demand answers and action!
Hospital staff and patients are already suffering.
In the meantime . . .

Don't Get Sick!

Saanich Mayor Calls Hydro Head 'Poorly Informed'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today a letter to the Victoria Daily Times from B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum is "saturated with inaccuracies."

He commented: "For the head of a provincial corporation to be so completely poorly informed as his letter reveals is clearly beyond belief."

Shrum, in a letter to the Times published Thursday, asked whether overhead power lines or sewage disposal has priority in Saanich, said he is "certain" Curtis would do something about sewer problems "if he had the money."

Shrum also said that "if" a sewage system is installed, ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay. He asked whether "construction of a sewage system that would stop the pollution of Gorge waters by septic tank seepage from Saanich" would have a higher priority than undergrounding a line across the Gorge.

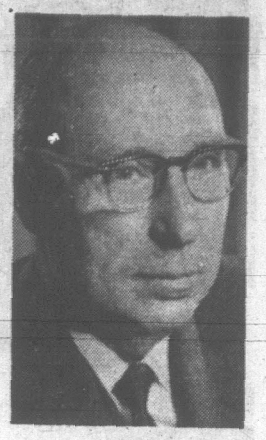
Curtis said the removal of raw sewage has been and remains Saanich's highest priority.

And this is being accomplished, he said, through a four-year program of extension of sewers to 3,400 acres (three-quarters the land size of Victoria city) and through trunk line and outfall work by the Capital Regional District.

The district, he pointed out, has already awarded the first contracts for work at the Macaulay Point outfall, located in Esquimalt and serving Esquimalt, parts of Victoria and much of the sewered and to-be-sewered areas of Saanich.

This rebuilt outfall will extend 6,100 feet into the sea instead of the present few feet, he said.



SHRUM
. . . 'if'

In addition, the Pollution Control Board of B.C. had granted a permit for the work and a special monitoring committee — including public health specialists and doctors and others — established to study water quality.

The PCB approval was on an experimental three-year basis to see if a treatment plant is necessary.

Curtis said there are no septic tanks in Saanich along the Gorge. The area has had sewers for 15 years, he said.

The reference to "seepage" was incorrect, although he acknowledged there is some flow down the Colquitz.

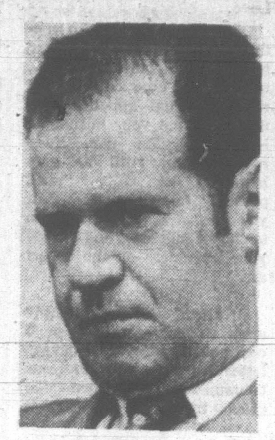
He pointed to last month's report, The Gorge Waterway, by Saanich design engineer Frank Neate.

In that report, Neate drew on pollution tests which suggested pollution in the Gorge was due to sanitary sewers emptying into the Inner Harbor in Victoria city (to be cleaned up under the approved city capital budget).

Neate said it is reasonable to conclude that organisms originating in Victoria Harbor travel into the inlet as far as Craigflower Bridge and highly likely they contribute to contamination in Portage Inlet.

The pollution tests showed water quality relatively high in Portage Inlet, decreasing from there to the harbor.



CURTIS
. . . not if

Curtis said not only has council identified and established sewerage as the top priority, but the public did so as well when it voted 80 per cent in favor of the sewerage enterprise referendum in 1968.

This enterprise covers the sewered and to-be-sewered areas in the current four-year plan. Work has already started in one area and sewers will connect with Macaulay regional lines when they are completed later this year.

"Our people have identified the problem and have committed their dollars," Curtis said.

To Shrum's reference that "if" a sewage system is to be installed ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay, Curtis said simply: "They have already done so."

HIGH-WIRE PROTESTER SEEKS ISLAND SUPPORT

Pat Codyre, who is fighting to prevent the B.C. Hydro from taking over his and four other homes on Munn Road intends to enlist the whole of Vancouver Island in his battle.

At a meeting in St. Joseph's Church Hall Thursday he said he would form groups both here and up-Island in a bid to prevent installation of overhead transmission lines.

Several Duncan and Sidney residents were in the audience of 50.

Codyre pointed out that elected officials on municipal councils were helpless to control B.C. Hydro, which is not an elected body.

"This is a mockery of democracy."

In support, Ald. Alan Newberry said B.C. Hydro has more power than the provincial government.

"This is the only body in the entire province that doesn't have to come to municipal council for zoning approval on a project," he said.

Regional Police, Firemen Urged by City Alderman

By JIM HUME

A plea for the unification of all area police and fire-fighting forces was made this afternoon by Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson.

The alderman said he wants to see one police force and one fire-fighting force providing protection for at least the four core municipalities.

He asked council to endorse a move which would see Victoria spearhead discussions with Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to "seek his advice and assistance in bringing about the unification of all police and fire-fighting forces in this area as soon as possible, via the regional district, or in any other way possible."

NOT ENOUGH

Olafson, while expecting to win sympathetic council support for his move, could run into criticism from other municipalities.

In the past the municipalities surrounding Victoria have been against unified police and fire departments.

But Olafson says parochial rejection of the proposal is not enough to satisfy him.

"That is why I want to go to the minister to seek his guidance and assistance," he said this morning. "I feel the time has come when we must stop shying away from what is so obviously a regional problem."

ALREADY STARTED

Olafson said local governments had already accepted the fact that sewers, hospitals and public health services were matters of regional concern.

"Crime doesn't recognize municipal boundaries, neither does fire," he said. "It's beyond me why we haven't long ago come to grips with the matter."

During the interview Olafson said he is not advocating unification to save money nor with the object being staff reductions.

"We might save a little money, but that isn't what I'm looking for," he said. "What unification would do is give the taxpayers much better value than they now receive."

Olafson said his appeal to the minister for action is not to be construed as a criticism of any local police or fire-fighting force.

BETTER PROTECTION

"We get excellent police and fire protection," he said. "But I can't for the life of me see how we can justify four administrations, four sets of dispatchers, for different systems for each of the municipalities.

"Centrally-controlled fire and police departments obviously provide better protection for the public at large."

Olafson said he expected criticism for his move.

"Change from the old ways is never easy," he said.

At noon Olafson was still unsure of what support he would get from fellow council members, but he said he expected favorable reaction from most.

TRAINING SCHOOL

And he knows he has the support of Ald. Peter Pollen.

In budget talks ealier this week, Pollen left no doubt that he favored the regionalization of police and fire protective services.

He made his stand known when he suggested that the Victoria fire training centre, approved in the capital budget vote, should be an area-wide training school.

In 1970 the Victoria police department budget has been estimated at $1,350,229.

The fire department is expected to spend $1,107,070.

In Saanich fire protection this year will cost $758,300 while police protection will cost the taxpayer $837,900 plus $15,385 in capital expenditures.

"There has to be a way to streamline these services," Olafson said. "And there has to be a way to hold cost in line while providing better value for the tax dollar."

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me when and where this year's Couchiching Conference will be held and what subject discussed?—W.B.

A. The Couchiching Conference will again be held at Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching, eight miles northwest of Orillia, Ontario, from July 15 to July 31. This year's subject is unknown.

200 Men Laid Off Here As Strike Closes Mill

Work stopped at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice sawmill this morning. The 200-man plant was being shut down this afternoon after "hot" logs reached the slipway from a boom branded by striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

Company manager Walter Nelson said there could be sufficient logs on hand for the 400-employee Victoria sawmill division, adjacent to the Point Ellice unit, to continue operating until Monday.

But he thought it likely the company would seek a court injunction Monday to restrain International Woodworkers of America members employed by BCFP from refusing to handle hot logs.

He said there appeared to be no further use in trying to get CMSG to lift the hot label from a two-week supply of logs stored in West Bay.

By tonight it was thought some 4,000 mill and woods workers would be out of jobs due to the CMSG strike preventing the normal flow of logs, booms, barges and scows used by the forest industry on the west coast.

'Gentle' Dog Castrated While on Daily Romp

A casual afternoon run for a purebred Irish setter turned into a horror story for a Central Saanich dog lover Thursday.

The four-year-old dog, owned by Trevor Hughes of 1934 Hovey Road, is in critical condition in an animal hospital today after being castrated by an unknown person.

Paddy, worth $125 as a pup, returned home after a two-hour absence exhausted, in deep shock and bleeding profusely.

"I have no idea who would do such a thing," Hughes said. "The dog was gentle and affectionate."

He said the castration had been done by someone who knew the technique used for operations on domestic farm animals.

"The operation was obviously done cleanly and efficiently, but it was done the wrong way for a dog. Paddy's life is just touch and go at this point — he's lost so much blood. Whoever did it just cut him and turned him loose still bleeding."

Central Saanich police are investigating the incident and Hughes has offered a $50 reward for information leading to the arrest of the individual or individuals involved.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has matched the reward with a further $50.

'CONTEMPTIBLE' SAYS JUDGE

2½ Years in Baseball Theft

A man who stole $1,138 from the National Little League here was sentenced today to two-and-a-half years in the penitentiary.

In handing down sentence, Judge William Ostler described the action of Charles Buchanan, 41, as contemptible.

"While you were pretending to support this youth organization you were commiting this wretched theft," said the judge.

Buchanan committed the theft while serving as treasurer for the baseball group between April 9 and Aug. 30, 1968.

Buchanan also pleaded guilty to stealing $396 from the Victoria Mobile Homes Towing Ltd., in 1969, and a pistol from the Bank of Nova Scotia main branch where he worked until 1968.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EXCEPT ON THE MORE remote claims, today's logger is a commuter. He may ride to his operation in a crummy, but it travels on tires instead of flanged steel. His natural transition is from footloose young high-stepper to householder and family man.

The roads that lace our Vancouver Island woods did more than end the logger's isolation. They changed his life pattern to an extent that the typical Tame Ape of the railway shows wouldn't have believed possible.

There were married loggers before the quiet revolution. As a gesture to these, the big outfits provided married quarters and the equivalent of the little red schoolhouse. But the claims were essentially preserves for the unwedded male. Camp was his home and his community, and to it he returned after each fling in town.

Sometimes in city winters, I would spot a remembered face in a Vancouver restaurant or beer parlor.

His stake was spent. He had a hangover. And he was homesick for the ordered, monastic life of the logger in the woods.

He would talk about camp as if it were paradise lost. The cookhouse food he had heartily damned three weeks before was pretty hard to beat. Look at these sad little hotcakes: what wouldn't he give for a stack of honest sweat-pads and a cup of good coffee.

Sure, logging was a hard life, and if a sapling didn't get him, the haulback line would. But that life had its points . . . He'd go on in that vein until I was a little homesick too.

The place he yearned for was a scatteration of weathered frame structures mounted on log sleds and strung out along a railway siding.

There were the long, low bunkhouses ranged in rows. Fronting them were wooden catwalks chewed and pitted by boot calks. There was the saw filer's many-windowed shack down by the tracks, the cookhouse-dining hall, and the meat house raised well off the ground.

Next to the timekeeper's office was the camp commissary, universally called by another name unflattering to management. In the commissary, the logger could replenish his needs. Tickets charged against his time bought new rigging gloves, socks, toothpaste, soap, fine-cut tobacco or maybe dark and pungent snoose in a little round can.

This was painful spending. It meant that much less to take down next trip. Skyline Blondy, spendthrift in town, was determinedly thrifty in the woods.

Add a first-aid shack, toss in a water-tank where the chunky logging locomotives paused to drink. And there, more or less, was the woods camp of a railway show flung down in a few acres of logging burn.

It had no real permanence. When it had served its function in one area, its buildings would travel by rail to make a little town elsewhere.

Its population was by no means permanent, either. A main tenet of logger philosophy was that a man should be free to go or stay as he chose.

So each steamer day, there was a coming and going — a man or two heading for the beach, and others arriving to make a stake.

The camp bedmaker, a logger himself before the years caught up with him, would assign the newcomer to a bunkhouse. His bed was a steel-framed cot with grey woollen blankets and clean white sheets. But with suitcase under the bed, packsack hung on a spike and small gear in a butter box nailed to the wall, he was back where Skyline Blondy yearned to be.

At home, that is, and ready to go to work. Give him a day, and he would be grumbling cheerfully about the lunchmaker's stinginess and the stupidities of the sidepush.

He was back in the woods, and it would be months before the city, with his enthusiastic co-operation, got a chance to pluck him again.

TRUSTEE TELLS BRUCH:

School Switch Won't Work

A member of the Greater Victoria school board has dismissed Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch's suggested solution to problems at Vic West elementary.

Bruch said some children could be sent to three Esquimalt schools as an alternative to using Vic West elementary's ailing 62-year-old main building.

Trustee Allan McKinnon says there will not be enough room at Lampson St., Macaulay and Rockheights in September for children from the six classrooms at Vic West.

McKinnon said Bruch based his suggestion on last October's enrolment rather than projections for next September. Instead of a surplus of six classrooms at the other schools, there will only be two, the trustee said.

Meanwhile, Mayor Courtney Haddock has announced he will ask for a meeting with the school board, Bruch and Education Minister Donald Brothers to search for a solution.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Love-Starved

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and my husband is 23. We've been married for a year and a half, and have a six-month-old son, which is the only reason I don't just pack up and leave.

My husband is worse than an old man. When he comes home from work, he kisses me, then goes in to look at the baby, then he buries his face in the newspaper until dinner. After dinner he can't get into bed fast enought — because that's where the television set is.

Our sex life, like — forget it. He says he had so much sex before marriage he doesn't even think about it any more. (That doesn't happen to be true in my case, but it doesn't bother him.)

When I want a little affection he makes me feel like a dirty old lady. I don't want to raise only one child, but if I ever get pregnant again it will be a miracle.

He is a hard-working man and a good person, really, but he is a lousy lover. Please tell me what to do. — Hungry for Love.

DEAR HUNGRY: Something is wrong with your husband. It's either physical, mental, or emotional. True, not all sexual appetites are the same, but your husband's is sadly below par. Keep nagging him until he gets help. If he is a "good person," he will realize that you are not a "flower — born to blush unseen, and waste your sweetness on the desert air."

DEAR ABBY: I am simply amazed at the response I continue to receive since my letter appeared in your column. It concerned the cruel tradition of denying brides the privilege of wearing white unless they were pure.

Of some 150 letters I received, only ten were negative. They suggested that I was encouraging promiscuity, which I did not, nor would I approve.

The pathetic tragedies of human suffering that have scarred the lives of so many persons needlessly is unbelievable.

When I offered you the use of my name, I had no idea you would include my church and its location. But I am now grateful to you for the gifts of kindness I have been able to receive because of it. I wish I were as good as some people perceive me to be.

My only regret was when I read my letter in your column, I saw that I had committed an error by referring to "black" as a symbol of evil or wrong. This is another cruel tradition carried on by our white racist culture unconsiously. One person wrote to me, critically because of it, and I sent her my apology. —Paul Whipple (Minister).

DEAR REVEREND WHIPPLE: You sound like a man I'd like to know.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago our son died. Friends and relatives kept us company up until the day of the funeral. Then we were left all alone.

I know they probably felt that the family wanted to be alone, which is so untrue, Abby. That was the time when we needed friends the most.

Many would call and ask us to come over. But we didn't really feel like going out. We aren't the type who would sit and cry and carry on in front of people. We needed our minds taken off our grief. Maybe we're different. Would you please ask your readers who lost someone close if they felt like we did. Or did they want to be left alone? — Alone in Anaheim.

DEAR ALONE: Offhand I'd say you are not different. Perhaps it will help to let people know that people do need people. We share our happiness with our friends. Why not our sorrow?

CONFIDENTIAL TO WILLIE MAE: Tell him that it's easy to become a father. It's harder to become a man.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

Shortcut to Sauerbraten Uses Canned Roast Beef

Sauerbraten can be a real production number or it can be no trouble at all.

Made by traditional methods, it requires a special marinade, hours or days of marinating, and long slow cooking to tenderness.

But it can be made with no marinade and no marinating, and about only a quarter hour's heating to achieve the proper flavor blend. How? By taking a shortcut right off the supermarket shelves: canned roast beef with gravy, and using it for the prime ingredient.

Sauerbraten is a hearty dish, so accompaniments can be on the light side: buttery hot peas, cabbage slaw and tender rye bread.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

2 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup chopped celery
½ cup dark raisins
2 tbsp. catsup
¾ cup crumbled gingersnaps (about 4)
½ cup water
¼ tsp. dry mustard
2 cans (12 oz. each) roast beef with gravy
Hot cooked noodles.

In hot butter or margarine, saute onion, celery and raisins 5 minutes. Add catsup. Blend gingersnaps with water and stir in; add dry mustard and cook, stirring, until thickened. Add roast beef with gravy; cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 15 minutes. Serve over hot, cooked plain or poppyseed noodles. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Victoria Students Contest Runners-Up

Their teacher, Margaret Martin, learned of the contest results by telegram.

"They mailed us a list of the winners right after the results were announced," she said. "But if there is a strike we won't know for weeks who came first."

The class, Foods 12B, has won an appliance of their choice up to the value of $300, and a set of textbooks for the school foods lab.

The contest, sponsored by a group of national food manufacturers, required that they plan a week's menus for a family of four using certain brand foods, making sure all meals were nutritionally sound.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Mathilda's Drain Worries Cease

By PENNY SAVER

"You can stop worrying about my drains now," said Mathilda to my husband recently. "I have drain insurance."

"Drain insurance?" he repeated incredulously.

Well, it it isn't called that," she replied, "but that is the way it seems to me. If I have any emergencies to do with drains, or roof leaks or anything of that sort at all, I have a number to call for quick, free, any-hour-of-the night service."

"Sounds great," he said with a grin. "But I do hope you checked to make sure the company has a good reputation."

Mathilda sniffed in indignation.

"At my age, I should be a good judge of character. Besides, the man practically begged me to call Better Business Bureau on the spot. He wouldn't do that unless he felt they would back him. The company isn't completely new, either. It has been going since early in 1968 in Vancouver, and since September here.

This service, she went on to explain, costs $34.50 a year. Three and five-year contracts are available, however, and depending on the terms of payment, the yearly cost can be as low as $24.50.

The first thing that the service provides when a person signs up for the service is a four-point preventive-care service (to be repeated annually, of course) that cleans the chimneys and eaves, reseals corners and joints of eaves, rotors all drain tiles, cleans the sump and checks the backwater valve if there is one.

This service could prevent emergencies in itself, and seems quite worth the yearly fee. But on top of this the plan provides 24-hour emergency service for minor roof leaks, leaks around the chimney, flooded basements and plugged plumbing at no extra charge.

"Of course, the emergency repair may still leave a more complex job to be done, and this would cost," said Mathilda. "The repair man, I am told, will notify you of this need, then you decide whether to get them to finish the job or call in someone else.

"But for an elderly person or someone who doesn't know about main shutoffs, it's the emergency service that counts.

"The company has men to do plumbing, roofing, eavestroughing, drains, painting, carpentry and so on, and feel that they can offer competitive prices to do such jobs. But, of course, you are free to shop if you think their estimate is high."

This company is willing to take any structure under their service, be it a private homr or a business.

Please call 382-3131 for information on how to contact this company.

Ottawa Girl Learns East Indian Dances

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Her face and feet covered with red paint, pounds of silver jewelry draped over her silk dancing sari and her hair decked with a garland of jasmine — pretty Anne-Marie Groves of Ottawa resembles anyone but a young school teacher from Canada.

In fact, an Indian expert watching her go through her three-hour routine of intricate Hindu dances said: "No one who sees her on the stage would think she is anything but an Indian."

Anne-Marie, by her skilful handling of the intricate steps and gestures of Bharata Natyam and Odissi dancing, has won acclaim from Indian dance critics. One said: "Anne-Marie is one of the best Western exponents of Bharata Natyam we have seen."

Anne-Marie, 28, was teaching physical education and science in a Madras high school when she decided to learn Indian dancing in 1964.

Indian dancing, for the serious performer such as AnneMarie, is an epacting profession.

One performance can last for three hours—after six hours of daily practice. The graceful mudras and abinaya take months to learn and years to perfect.

Each gesture and movement carries a message as Anne-Marie, is an exacting fingers weave in harmony with carefully-rehearsed facial expressions.

Asked about her work, Anne-Marie said: "The hardest thing is to stand with your knees bent for a whole program—sometimes you get the feeling that stones are in your heels."

THROUGH THE EYES OF CHILDREN

In the creative eye of 12-year-old Kathy Gati of Monterey School a puppy dog becomes a loveable creation in brilliant orange paper. Office workers Gailene Kerr and Betty Bradford couldn't resist getting closer to the mutt on their lunch-hour visit to the provincial museum. COUNCIL OF WOMEN TOLD:

Outmoded Bylaws Should Go

The B.C. Provincial Council of Women took a long hard look at its organization and objectives Thursday at the final session of its 51st annual meeting.

National Council vice-president Mrs. C. W. Mellish said the Provincial Council, like all institutions, has to deal with sudden change and it has to deal quickly.

"The structures and methods that were effective even a few years ago, are not effective now. Our groups defined purpose is to try to improve the community and community life for everyone. Somehow, we are not achieving this with the same efficiency that we used to," said Mrs. Mellish.

She blamed the outmoded by-laws and structures that guide the Council.

"The by-laws were set up in the first place only to help us achieve our aims. When they start to become a hindrance we should get rid of them," she said.

Mrs. Mellish also criticized the system of annual resolutions passed at the provincial and national levels. She suggested that something considered terribly important in one area, may not be relevant in another.

"The individual organizations making up the Council will be much more effective if they deal with something they are interested in. People have got to deal with problems in their own vicinities," she said.

"Instead of resolving to petition Ottawa not to legalize marijuana, we should see what we ourselves can do in our own areas," she said.

Mrs. Mellish suggested that policies, instead of resolutions, should be passed at the provincial or national level. Each member organization could then adopt the policy if it dealt with an important issue in the area.

"In fact the member organizations should develop their own policies. When they see a need, they shouldn't wait for a policy to be handed down at an annual meeting before taking action. If they see a possible solution they should do it," she said.

She asked the delegates to report to their own organizations, and then write to the national council with suggested changes for the National executive to consider.

Mrs. Mellish, who is with the community chest in Vancouver, will attend the National Council of Women on June 1 in Winnipeg.

'If I Had to Give Up Feminity I Wouldn't Bother' Says Elford

Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay admits she is a New Feminist.

However, she hastens to add, she is the least radical type of feminine fighter.

The radicals are sometimes accused of wanted to replace feminity with equality.

"If running for public office meant I had to give up my feminity, I wouldn't have bothered," Mayor Elford, sporting a lemon petal hat, emphatically told the Women's Canadian Club Thursday.

Perhaps, she conceded, her non-radical but firm belief in women's rights comes from her experience in the community and in public office.

The topic of Mayor Elford's speech was 'Who Says It's a Man's World?'

The vocal feminists are railing against a society which trains women for jobs and then expects them to retire to their kitchens at an early age, she said.

MAYOR ELFORD

Society, its customs and prejudices, must change, Mayor Elford stated.

"Women must play a larger role in order to help control the cancerous problems which beset our society."

Outlining areas of concern to women such as day care centres, care of the elderly and planned obsolescence, Mayor Elford said women need more training "in order to raise a family, run a home, serve in the community and hold down a full-time or part-time job."

Are women likely to enter more into public life, she asked.

In 1917 women were given the federal vote and in 1921 Agnes MacPhail became the first woman to enter Parliament.

"It is a sad commentary that in 1970 there is only one woman in our federal Parliament."

Mayor Elford urged the women to prove they can be successful in male-dominated fields.

"Then we will have more say in the caucuses and backrooms of this nation.

"If this does not happen, then I must say that it is women themselves who state 'It is a man's world'."

Beene's Birdwoman Brought Laughter . . .

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — You've heard of The Birdman of Alcatraz?

Make way for a sequel—The Birdwoman From The Nation's Garment District.

It happens that feather touches are what's new in fancy fall and winter collections being shown the nation's buyers assembled here. And that's who we get this "birdwoman."

She was seen in the Geoffrey Beene show, all dressed in a pink long gown with a pink feathered jacket. The outfit was topped by a feather helmet, also pink.

When she came on the scene this birdwoman tickled ribs so much that the usually tight-lipped buyers broke into uncontrolled laughter.

"That's the end of Miss White Owl," a buyer said, referring to the sexy symbol for a cigar manufacturer. "We now have Miss Pink Owl."

Beene put shocking pink feathers all over long sleeves of a black long dress. A collar of what looked like porcupine quills (feathers, we were assured) broke the monotony of another long black with portrait neckline.

It was worn tips up—reaching to the ears and lips.

"That's to hide your flea collar," one buyer quipped as more laughter rocked the showroom.

"Call it 'ambush.' A mouth full of feathers. It could only happen in America."

Weinberg and Beene followed the long, lean line for daytime clothes, with hemlengths roaming from less than a foot from floor to mid-calf most of the time.

In case you have any doubts about the hemline length that's going to dominate, listen to what Weinberg said.

"While some of us have played with different lengths in previous collections, this time we mean business.

"I feel that every woman who has fashion awareness will also have a new wardrobe of lengths—that is all lengths starting from below the knee and moving downward to suit the different mood of the moment."

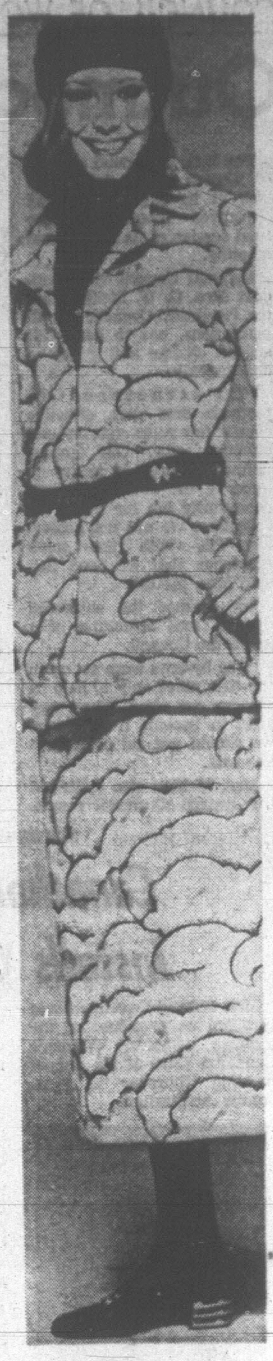
"Known as the unconstructed look, this is exactly how it is achieved — un-unnecessary undercover agents."

He meant bras and all the bra-burners in women's lib will be pleased to know the designer practices what he preaches.

Several of his long, after-five dresses had clinging but opaque long-sleeved bodices. The way to fabric clung to the anatomy it was plain these were meant for wearing sans bra.



. . . But Designers Serious About Banishing the Knee

By BERNARDINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Women who want to buy just plain cloothes next fall will probably be able to find some, but that's not what designers are counting on. The forward-thinkers want to sell "a fashion experience" —a life style, not just the cut of a sleeve or a longer skirt.

Part of it is flak to distract attention from the fact that all skirts are longer—in a way, it's an apology for mid-lengths.

When a designer says, "I'm for all lengths," he means anywhere from below to the knee to the ankle. He never means mini-skirts or anything else even slightly above the knees. With varying degrees of enthusiasm, designers have banished knees and are touting self-expression in the clothes for next fall.

It's tough on the woman who simply wants a coat that fits or a color that she likes, but it's a new kind of problem that she'll have to cope with.

Has she, for instance, been waiting all her life to free her spirit by wearing gaucho pants? They're the calf-length, loose trousers worn by the cowboys on the pampas, and there isn't a collection that doesn't have some for big-city girls.

Knitted ones with clingy tops are for leisure hours; tweed or flannel ones with matching jackets are for formal day wear.

Why on earth gaucho pants? Because, you see, regular pants are so safe. Any woman who's troubled about skirt lengths can cop out by wearing long pants, designers reason. (It's hard to recall that a year or two back she worried about wearing pants to restaurants, let alone to work.)

So the avant-garde can prove they are by wearing the new length and pants at the same time.

Any kind of pants looks fine to Gunther Rucker of Project 2, who, just a few months ago, was happily working in the Courreges manner. His neatly tailored coats and dresses with jackets were pleasant and tasteful.

"The all-American princess look is out," says Gunther, who is gilding his gaucho pants with nailheads, hanging ermine tails down the side of leather jeans and making jumpsuits to go under coats.

To Marshall Klugman of Susan Thomas' swinging division, self-expression is looking sexy. He doesn't think longer skirts are a handicap.

"You cover the leg, but you show everything else," he says. With his predilection for slinky knits, shirred strategically at the waist or hops, he has a point. Often he wraps the clingy outfit up in a bulky poncho or cape. He almost has to — some of the clothes are so revealing. The store buyers loved them. They're not against slink.

Indian Fashions

TORONTO (CP) — An Indian from the Cutler Reserve in Northern Ontario, Frank Meawasige presented some of his latest spring and summer fashions Wednesday to an enthusiastic audience at the annual meeting of the Toronto Diocesan Anglican Church Women.

One of the most stunning creations of Canadian Indian fashions was a white V-neck leather dress with a white leather fringe from empire waist-line to hem.

Special attention was drawn to a midi cinnamon-colored dress with a wide gold-buckled belt and matching gold-buckled vest. The ensemble was accented with a fringed head-band and wrist-band.

Mr. Meawasige also presented several fringed ponchos in suede and the wet-look.

Iranians 'Buy' Wives Despite Soviet Reforms

MOSCOW — After 50 years of Soviet reforms, the social emancipation of women is lagging in Central Asia, where many parents still prevent their daughters from going out to work and even sell them to suitors for bride money.

Soviet labor statistics proudly proclaim that half the country's work force consists of women, although men are still overwhelmingly predominant in influential positions, and women tend to drift into special occupations such as medicine or driving street cars.

Employment of women is well above the national average in the republics of Central Asia and the Caucasus, and a good percentage of the women shown in the labor statistics for those parts of the country are probably Russian or Ukrainian immigrants.

The least-emancipated women seem to be found among the Tadjiks, an Iranian people living in the wild mountain regions at the Soviet Union's extreme south-eastern tip bordering on China and Afghanistan.

A leading woman Communist in Tadjikistan disclosed recently that the practice of demanding "kalym," or bride money, was still quite common there. One young man complained that the parents of the girl he loved demanded the equivalent of nearly $2,400 in cash, as well as sheep, cloth, sugar, flour, rice, tea and other gifts.

Although the practice is illegal, and the courts deal with one or two cases every year the custom continues under the guise of gifts. The Communist youth organization had to intervene to break up one such enforced marriage and rescue the girl at the last moment.

The main economic effect of the traditional ideas about the status of women is that not enough girls can be found to work in the textile mills or to be trained to drive tractors, and strangely enough the problem is said to be worse in the towns than in the countryside.

Last January, Pravda, the organ of the Central Committee of the Communist party, admitted that bride money was also still demanded in parts of Turkmenistan, on the Iranian border. In Azerbaijan, a republic inhabited by a Turkish people on the shores of the Caspian Sea, women also lag in taking their place in the economy and administration.

Georgia and Armenia, although Christian by tradition, are also conservative about the social role of women, and a foreign technician who had been working in Tashkent reported that Uzbek friends had offered to sell him a wife for a few hundred rubles.

Uvic Medical Sapling From Old Greek Tree

By DON VIPOND

Legend has it that Hippocrates lectured to his medical students on the Greek island of Cos 25 centuries ago in the shade of a large Mediterranean plane tree.

The father of scientific medicine is enshrined in history but the tree lives on—and is providing hospitals, universities and doctors around the world with an intriguing link with the past.

A sapling grown from the seed of Hippocrates' plane tree was planted at the University of Victoria Wednesday afternoon to mark the 75th anniversary of the Victoria Medical Society and the spirit of co-operation between the society and university.

LITTLE TREE

The little tree, which has leaves like a maple and is a member of the sycamore family, stands in the southwest corner of the quadrangle guarded by a steel railing and marked by a plaque.

There's lots of room for it to grow which is just as well because its parent is now 46 feet in diameter and fills the village square on Cos.

About two dozen people were on hand to hear brief speeches from Uvic president Bruce Partridge, Dr. John Higgins, president of the Victoria Medical Society and the man behind the unique tribute, Dr. William Gibson, professor of medical history at UBC.

Dr. Gibson has been to Cos more than once and several years ago arranged with the lord mayor there to be sent seeds from the tree.

Because the tree is so ancient most of the seeds proved infertile and for a time the doctor used soft X-rays to spot the healthy seeds. That was too time-consuming so now he just plants all of the 10 pounds of seed he receives annually, he said Wednesday.

HAS SAPLINGS

The ones that do grow thrive and Gibson now has saplings 10 feet high at the UBC campus.

He has sold about 200 saplings to doctors and institutions and the $5,000 he has raised goes to construction of a small meeting house on Cos where groups of the medical fraternity on pilgrimage can meet. The building is almost completed.

Gibson noted Wednesday that over the centuries the plane tree on Cos has not only grown enormously but has become hollow.

In the banter between medical and university people prior to the ceremony Wednesday someone noted that Uvic's tree would probably be hollow too before the university persuades the government to establish a medical school in Victoria.

More Rebels Land in Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A second group of anti-Castro raiders has landed in Cuba, an exile radio broadcast says.

Salvador Lew of Miami radio station WQBA identified the invaders as commandos of the Christian Nationalist Movement. He said the Miami-based group encountered no opposition in landing.

Lew gave no details. However, Pablo Castellon, who identified himself as a spokesman for the group, said the invaders were led by Capt. Orlando Lorenzo, 34, secretary-general of the movement.

The invasion report came three weeks after Fidel Castro said his forces crushed a raiding party mounted by Alpha 66, another exile group based in Miami.

Child Sale Nipped

PALERMO, Sicily (Reuters) — Police disclosed today the arrest of an impoverished mother of five children who sold her newborn son for 50,000 lire (about $83). The mother, 26-year-old Elizabetha Minasola, and the woman buyer, 31-year-old Angla Olivieri, were charged with illegally altering the child's civil status.

World War Aces Gather in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Three of the Second World War's most famous aces are expected at a four-day Commonwealth aircrew reunion to be held in Winnipeg Sept. 24-27.

They are Germany's Lt.-Gen. Adolf Galland and the RAF's Air Vice-Marshal J. E. (Johnnie) Johnson and legless ace Douglas Bader, of Battle of Britain fame.

The reunion, organized as a "giant nostalgic happening," is geared for an attendance of 2,000 on a first-come, first-serve basis.

It is being organized by the Winnipeg Wartime Pilots and Observers Association, and is open to flyers of any war, regardless of rank or aircrew speciality, who flew with Commonwealth air forces.

Invitations have also been sent to other former foes such as Lt.-Gen. Galland.

Reunion chairman Jack Johnstone said inquiries to date represent close to 50 Second World War squadrons. Also attending will be several First World War flyers.

Trial Adjourned

WINNIPEG (CP) — The trial of Ivan Rival, 23, of Winnipeg, charged in a March 20 demonstration here against Prime Minister Trudeau, was adjourned Thursday until June 17. He pleaded not guilty earlier to causing a disturbance and obstructing police officers at the demonstration in front of the Centennial concert hall where Trudeau was attending a fund-raising dinner.

Policy Changing

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government may soon become directly involved in agricultural marketing, Premier Harry Strom said Thursday. The province's long-standing policy has been to avoid direct participation in the field, "but it's becoming apparent some moves must be taken," he told a news conference.

Penalty Stays

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Gerald Wuttunee, spokesman for the Red Pheasant Indian Reserve said today that reserve native William Wuttunee, a Calgary lawyer, remains banished from the reserve despite having recanted his support of the federal white paper on Indian affairs.

Prompt Incompetents

CALGARY (CP) — Incompetents win high positions in industry by default because most firms fail to recognize the need for an organized personnel evaluation and development program, John Quinton, a management consultant from Houston, said here.

"The result is the good people quit and you wind up putting the old boy who has been sitting there for 15 years into the responsible job," Dr. Quinton told the 21st annual meeting of the Petroleum Society of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Law Clinic Judged Success

WINNIPEG (CP) — The first neighborhood law clinic offering free legal advice was an unqualified success, said the executive director of the People's Opportunity Services.

Lee Glassco said Thursday that about 30 persons turned up at the clinic held at the POS offices in downtown Winnipeg. They received advice on matters ranging from workmen's compensation to an estate problem.

The service was set up by the Manitoba Law Society and social workers. It will be conducted each Thursday evening by lawyers and social workers chosen on a rotating basis.

"This is a real landmark in the war on poverty because a working union has been created between the legal and social work professions," said Glassco.

Other objectives of the clinic, he said, are legal research projects and public education on such questions as consumer and civil rights.

Compensation Needed

WAWANESA, Man. (CP) — Village council is preparing a claim for compensation from the provincial government "to offset the economic blow the village will suffer" if a compulsory government automobile insurance plan is instituted, Hugh Wilton, president of the "Save Our Village" committee said Thursday. The town's only major industry is Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Company.

BCHIS Misled Us, Charges Hospital Board

BURNS LAKE (CP) — The chairman of the Bulkley-Nechako Regional Hospital District claimed Thursday the district had been misled by the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service over purchase of a hospital in Smithers.

Chairman Ted Rowland said resignation of the entire 14-member district board will be considered at a special meeting May 28.

Rowland said in an interview that the dispute with BCHIS and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark arose over the board's purchase of a Roman Catholic hospital in Smithers for $65,000.

He said the board planned to buy the hospital from funds approved by district ratepayers in a $6,500,000 referendum in 1968.

The referendum covered a number of projects, including hospital facilities at Vanderhoof and Fort St. James, expansion of facilities at Burns Lake, expansion and renovation at Smithers, and hospital studies at Houston.

All of this work would have been on a cost-sharing basis with BCHIS, Rowland said.

'ALL ON FILE'

He said that when it was decided to buy the Smithers hospital outright, a senior official of BCHIS provided advice on how to go about doing this through use of referendum funds. "We have all of this correspondence on file," Rowland said.

"Then, after we had done a lot of negotiating and reached an agreed price and passed over a cheque for $165,000, the minister, Loffmark, informed us we could not use referendum funds and that the cheque would have to be made good through non-shareable funds."

Rowland said this would mean a direct taxation levy on all ratepayers in the regional district.

"In effect, we're the taxing scapegoats," he said.

The board refused Wednesday night to pass a 1970 budget for the regional hospital district, and tabled the matter to May 28.

Rowland said three of the 14 directors were absent Wednesday and the question of a mass resignation would require full attendance. He said this could be expected at the May 28 meeting.

Farm Marketing Council Idea Object of Opposition Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — A government measure to establish a national farm marketing council was belted around the barnyard by angry Conservatives Thursday as they charged it is an authoritarian step toward state farming.

Flaying at the assertion of Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, who said the bill would bring order to farm marketing, Conservative spokesman said it would silence producers and place all farm marketing under the strong arm of the federal government.

"It's provisions are authoritarian," said Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, "and it can make any farm product into a public utility."

"It places the future of virtually every farmer in the country under the control of the federal government."

The bill provides for the formation of the council and for national marketing agencies for all products except grain and dairy products, which are already covered by separate agencies.

The fact that producers would not have an effective voice in the council means "state farming," said Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) as he labelled the legislation "hypocrisy at best."

He proposed an amendment that would, in effect, kill the bill in its present form.

Both the chairman and the vice-chairman of the council would be appointed by the government, and he said this means the organization would be headed by those who please the Liberal government.

Don Mazankowski (PC — Vegreville) said that when the bill goes before a Commons committee for detailed study, steps would be taken to give farmers "a more meaningful role" on the proposed board.

Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer) said farmers are distrustful of such marketing agencies as the Canadian wheat board and the Canadian dairy commission.

And joining the Opposition attack was Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) who said the measure would give the government "complete control over the farming economy."

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) said the bill amounted to a form of state control seldom seen in a free country. Richard Southam (PC—Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) called it "an ingenious piece of political deception."

Surprise Arrives

ASHBY, England (AP) — Maureen Manby was admitted to hospital Thursday with a bad pain in her stomach. She was taken aback when doctors told her she was pregnant. She was even more surprised when 30 minutes later a six-pound 10-ounce baby girl was born. "It was all a complete shock," said Mrs. Manby, 27, "but I'm delighted." Her husband Tom, 30, said: "I did think she had put on more weight recently and teased her about it."

Tonight's Top Television Shows

GET SMART. 7:30, Channel 7. The kids will enjoy the old comedy routine in this one — Smart accidentally locks his boss and Larrabee in a bank vault. The premise still works and Smart has a good time rushing about recruiting a safe expert from prison, and a forger as a last minute substitute. The appearance of the forger is a nice, idiotic touch, and veteran Ned Glass is neatly cast in the foolish part.

THE HIGH CHAPARRAL. 7:30, Channel 5. "Alliance." (Repeat). Eventually, Johnny Ringo rides into every western and the notorious gunfighter turns up here tonight. It seems that Ringo, a good friend of Manolito's, has been engaged by the Army to bring in a renegade Apache, an act which will jeopardize peace with the Indians, so vital to John Cannon. There's plenty of action, and a big gun battle at the end in which none of the combatants is visibly killed.

TIM CONWAY SHOW. 8 p.m., Channel 8. If you can't get laughs out of the dialogue on this show, wild flying scenes are supposed to do the trick. Spud and Herb careen through the air, supposedly auditioning for a TV commercial maker. Instead, their passenger turns out to be an FAA inspector, all part of a joke played on the boys by their airline rivals. It's predictable comedy all the way.

THE GHOST AND MRS. MUIR. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Medium Well Done." (Repeat). The main attraction in this episode is Shirley Booth in the role of a flighty medium who comes to Gull Cottage to be interviewed by Mrs. Muir, and stays to stage a seance. The Captain is furious and he puts on a spook show for the benefit of Miss Booth, which should delight the viewer.

NAME OF THE GAME. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Emissary." (Repeat). Fans are treated to on-location films of Versailles and Paris, a guest starring role for Charles Boyer, and publisher Glenn Howard's (Gene Barry) cool under pressure, in another tale of Communist intrigue and abduction that must be nipped in the bud. The plot involves an international conference on global air pollution which the Red Chinese agree to attend but then walk out on, and the problem is how to get them to come back. Topical though the theme may be, most of the play revolves around Glenn's thwarted and assorted attempts to reach his old Marxist friend (Boyer)and get him to intervene with the Red Chinese.

NET PLAYHOUSE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. "Cathy Come Home." (Repeat). This extraordinary BBC production is a shocker, brilliantly executed, flawlessly directed, and matchlessly played by Carol White at the head of a perfect cast. Viewers must be forewarned, however, that what they're about to see is not a play but a dramatized documentary about the "casualties of the welfare state" in England, written with driving force and startling research by playwright Jeremy Sandford. The author freely admits that he wrote the play to shock the nation into action, so that the disintegration of a family left homeless for lack of housing, would not happen again. Tune in.

SPECIAL. 9:00 p.m., Channel 4. "With These Hands — The Rebirth of the American Craftsman." In this age of the machine and the computer, it's refreshing and inspiring to spend an absorbing hour with eight complete individuals who work with their hands, and create beauty and art. The craftsmen, scattered all over the country, are a Japanese-born lady potter now living in New Jersey; a retired postmaster turned expert woodcarver in Wisconsin; a glass blower from Minnesota; a California sculptor who works with massive metal structures; a lady weaver who migrated from Manhattan to New Hampshire; a ceramist from Colorado; a California sculptor who uses a chain saw to carve giant tree trunks; and a creator of way-out motorized ceramic and clay figures, also from California. Not only will you be fascinated watching each of them at work, but you'll be equally intrigued by their personal philosophies and opinions. Altogether a unique hour not to be missed!

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

8 p.m., Channel 8: The Lonely Profession (1969 TV movie), Harry Guardino, Dean Jagger. A private eye is suspected of murder.

9 p.m., Channels 7 and 13: The Crooked Road (1964 English drama), Robert Ryan, Stewart Granger. A political melodrama filmed in Yugoslavia.

9 p.m., Channel 13: Double Feature: Beginning of the End (1957 science-fiction), Peggy Castle, Peter Graves. Giant grasshoppers menace the world this time. The Flying Serpent (1946 melodrama), George Zucco, An archeologist discovers a fabulous treasure guarded by a flying serpent.

11:30, Channel 7: Fort Apache (1948 western), John Wayne, Henry Fonda, Shirley Temple. Brass-bound army colonel sticks to the book and invites an Indian massacre.

11:40, Channel 2: The Spoilers (1956 adventure), Anne Baxter, Jeff Chandler. Classic western yarn about those who turned the Yukon into a claim-jumper's paradise.

11:40, Channel 8: Horror of Dracula (1958 English melodrama), Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee. A fiendish count rises from the dead to seek his victims.

1 a.m., Channel 4: Black Hand (1950 drama), Gene Kelly, J. Carrol Naish, Teresa Celli. About the activities of the Mafia in the Italian neighborhoods of New York.

6.5% Mortgage Planned in U.S.

By ROBERT J. SAMUELS

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. House subcommittee Thursday approved a 4 billion dollar plan to establish a National Development Bank to supply home mortgages for middle-income families at interest rates not exceeding 6.5 per cent.

OPPOSITION EXPECTED

The administration is expected to oppose the plan. Thursday the voting in the House banking and currency subcommittee followed party lines, with eight Democrats supporting the measure and six Republicans opposing it.

a The bill is scheduled to come before the full committee next Tuesday.

Under the proposal, the President would have the option of using general revenues or tapping private pension funds and commercial banks to fund the new bank.

Pension funds and foundations could be required to divert up to 2.5 per cent of their assets into market securities whose proceeds would be re-lent by the new bank. To use commercial bank funds, the President would have to win the cooperation of the federal reserve system, which could authorize banks to transfer some of their cash reserves — now on deposit at the FED, where they earn no interest — to the new bank.

IN TROUBLE

According to its democratic sponsors, the new plan is intended to provide assistance for middle-income families too wealthy to qualify for existing federal housing subsidies. These middle-income families, the Democrats say, are experiencing difficulty not only in finding mortgage money but also in paying today's high interest rates — 8.51 per cent in March on conventional loans.

For the administration, however, the Democratic proposal represents another obstacle blocking quick enactment of its own package to provide more mortgage money for housing.

The main administration proposal involves supplying 250 million dollars to subsidize loans to the nation's savings and loan associations, the single largest source of funds for homebuilding.

These new below-market interest loans would be aimed at preventing S & Ls from making huge net repayments of their 10 billion dollars in outstanding loans from the 12 regional federal home loan banks. If the S & LS quickly repay these funds, the money available for new mortgages would decline correspondingly.

But the administration's proposal, which passed the Senate 72-0, is now contained in the same legislation with the National Development Bank.

Cowichan Can't Quit Malaspina

Thursday the Cowichan school board said it was pulling out of Malaspina regional college. Today the college said it can't.

"Under the recently passed amendments to the Public Schools Act a school board must have the unanimous approval of the other participating school districts as well as the consent of the council of public instruction (the cabinet) and the minister of education before that district can withdraw from participation," W. R. MacMillan, chairman of the Malaspina College Council, said in a statement today.

TOO HIGH

Cowichan school board chairman David Haywood, in announcing the withdrawl Thursday, said his board feels Cowichan is paying too high a share of operating costs.

He said the school board had been seeking changes in financing of the college for the past four months. It wants the number of students from the district taken into account.

MacMillan said today the agreement under which the year-old college functions includes a uniform tax levy for each of the participating school districts.

Haywood had pointed out that last year the Cowichan district paid 28.24 per cent of the college's operating costs but Cowichan district students represented less than 10 per cent of the college enrolment.

Macmillan today expressed concern about the effect of the Cowichan announcement on students from the Duncan area.

"Students already enrolled or graduating senior secondary students from the Cowichan area should be assured that Malaspina will continue to accept them at the lower registration fees that participating school districts enjoy."

Subway For Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The Brazilian government gave the go-ahead Thursday to construction of Rio's first subway system, to be built with the help of foreign money. A second subway also is planned for Sao Paulo, 220 miles southwest of the capital. Each subway is planned to extend 41 miles.

Victoria Hospitals Have 1.8 Staff Ratio

Cutting 50 from the staff at Royal Columbian Hospital at New Westminster will bring it closely in line with staff ratios at Victoria's two major hospitals.

Figures which contrast the size of staff to number of beds in three hospitals show there are slightly over two staff members per bed at Royal Columbian and about 1.8 staff per bed at both St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee Hospitals.

The staff cut of 50 being undertaken at Royal Columbian will drop its ratio to about 1.8 as well.

The figures:

At Royal Columbian: a staff of 931 for 445 beds, producing a ration of 2.1 staff per bed.

At St. Joseph's: a staff of 783 for 428 beds producing a ration of about 1.8 staff per bed.

At Royal Jubilee: an adjusted staff figure of 1,130 (which takes into account 1,075 full-time employees and 168 people who work part-time regularly) for 610 beds (including those in use at the Eric Martin Institute) for a ration of about 1.8 staff per bed.

Jaycee 'Dogs Thrown Out

The Juicy Jaycee Hotdog, with mustard and relish, has again been banished from the grounds of Memorial Arena.

The saga of the hotdog started two years ago when Victoria city council established policy which saw city staff operate concessions at city-owned recreation centres.

That policy was adhered to firmly until Monday afternoon when former alderman Michael J. Griffin persuaded the city's recreation and community services committee that the Juicy Jaycee Hotdog was different from other hotdogs.

The committe reversed standard policy and gave permission to the Jaycees to operate a booth adjacent to Memorial Arena during the Jaycee Fair next week.

Jaycee joy was short-lived.

This was budget week and city council was in cutting frame of mind. Reminded by Ald. Hugh Ramsay that recreation facilities lost $93,000 a year and that the deficit would go higher if concession revenues were lost, council Thursday overruled its committee.

Said Ald. Percy Frampton, a former Jaycee: "We did a telephone survey and eight members of council said they were against letting the Jaycee organization break the rules."

There are nine members of council.

Industrialists Back Nixon's Cambodia Raid

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Top industrialists almost unanimously support the U.S. drive into Cambodia but express grave concern over public pessimism and uncertainty and—in a few cases—sharply criticize Nixon's handling of anti-war protests on college campuses.

Some members of the Business Council, opening their spring meeting here with five cabinet officers and other high administration officials, told reporters privately they feel the psychological impact of the Cambodia incursions could turn the present economic slowdown into a real recession.

The council members, including the heads of about 100 of the country's biggest corporations, were generally enthusiastic about Nixon and his policies at their fall meeting in October. And few criticized him Thursday to reporters.

But one major manufacturer, deploring Nixon's reference to college demonstrators last Friday as "these bums," said: "I don't believe you can get anyone to listen to you by calling them names."

Several businessmen agreed that public confidence had been seriously shaken by apprehension over the possible spreading of warfare in Southeast Asia, as reflected in the stock market slump, the revival of fears of prolonged inflation, and the resurgence of violent demonstrations across the country.

"Until last Thursday I would have said we were about at the bottom of the economic cycle and were starting back up," said one industrialist. "Now I'm not so sure."

The Businss Council is a private organization which offers research and advisory help to federal agencies on economic matters.

Industry Production Falls Off

OTTAWA (CP) — The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' index of industrial production fell in March to 171.1 from 174.4 in February, based on 1961 output equalling 100, the bureau announced today.

The decline, mostly in the output of durable goods manufacturing, put the index back where it was in January after an unusual rise in February, and lower than it was in March last year.

The index measures the output of manufacturing, mining including oil wells, and the electric power, gas and water utilities.

The index showed a series of declines during much of 1969, falling from a peak of 171.3 in March to 164.5 in August.

Only the non-metallic mining industry, textiles, and printing and publishing showed increases in output in March this year. The biggest declines were in mineral fuels, tobacco, rubber and petroleum and coal products.

In percentage terms, manufacturing output was down 1.9 per cent, and durable manufacturing off 2.6 per cent. Mining output was down 3.5 per cent, and the utilities showed a one-per-cent gain.

Skin Flick Banned

ROME (Reuters) — Italy banned Wednesday the British film version of D. H. Lawrence's novel Women in Love, which features nude love scenes.

EITHER RACE GOES ON OR NEW MENU

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The 9th annual world's largest turtle race with a record 75 entries has been postponed because of the closure of California colleges which participate in the event.

An official at California State Collage at Los Angeles where the race was to be held, said it would be rescheduled next week or "we'll have an awful lot of turtle soup in the cafeteria."

Cannes Rules Out Three Top Films

CANNES, France (UPI) — Twenty-nine films from 18 countries have been entered in the annual Cannes film festival opening tonight although three of the most talked about are being shown outside the competition.

The directors of the festival decided to put outside the competition three films because their directors already have won numerous prizes, Luis Bunel's Tristana, Ingmar Bergman's The Passion and Sydney Pollak's They Shoot Horses Don't They.

Favorites among the officially entered films for prizes to be awarded May 16 include The Things of Life by Claude Sautet of France, Dramma Della Gelosia by Ettore Scola of Italy, Leo the Last by John Boorman of England and Countryside After the Battle by Andrezj Wajda of Poland.

Directors Otto Preminger of the United States, Wajda and Franco Brusati of Italy were expected to attend the festival. No film stars were slated to appear, and observers expected an unusually quiet festival.

More than 300 films will unroll during the festival incuding those entered in the critics' week, the film market and various other out-of-competition showings.

Wallflowers Give Haunting Scent

By HILDA BEASTALL

The scent of wallflowers is one to classify as haunting for nothing else is quite like it. Twenty years or more may elapse between sniffs yet instantly the scent is familiar and you can name it.

Hilda

For this reason if no other, wallflowers are grown wherever the winter climate permits their survival. The plants are in flower now.

Wallflowers are classifed as biennials, like most of the cabbage tribe to which they are closely related.

To have strong bushy plants in bloom during spring, seeds should be sown the previous May, ususally about the third week.

This can be done in a partly shaded patch of finely cultivated soil, and the resulting seedlings transplanted while tiny.

Because of their close relationship to cabbages, the wallflowers like similar soil and general growing conditions. Give them a rich soil full of compost or old manure, but free of peatmoss and any acid forming material.

During the summer, if shaded from full sun during hottest part of the day, wallflowers will grow into bushy plants about four inches high and as broad. By early September the time comes to move them into the beds where they are to bloom the following spring.

The cool fall weather and normally mild winters here give ideal conditions for further growth and development, so that by March wallflower buds are formed in tight clusters at the top of each leafy little branch.

Plants are 10 to 12 inches high by flowering time with some of the newer colored hybrids a little taller.

The old colors were gold, yellow, and a dark rich mahogany. These were spicily fragrant and they blended well in color with yellow and pink tulips by the time both were in full bloom.

In today's color range we find a rosy carmine, ruby-violet, chamois which changes to rose, in addition to more orange-scarlet and red-brown shades.

The key to healthy plants full of bloom in spring is the early sowing of seed (May) and early fall (September) planting into final places. The roots do not take kindly to being disturbed, so each plant is moved with its shovelful of rich soil from the summer growing place.

If wallflowers are bought in fall get them early, plant them right away, giving them all the conditions outlined for raising your own.

Seeds sown late in summer will grow all right, but the flowers may be delayed until the second spring after sowing.

When wallflower plants have once flowered you might as well compost them, for their biennial nature prevents them from again putting on such a marvelous show.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Dean Rusk, the secretary of state under both President Kennedy and President Johnson, is an ardent bridge fan. Reports from "usually reliable sources" indicate that he was a pretty good player while serving as a cabinet member.

As to whether he will be just as good a player now that he is "grounded" at the University of Georgia remains to be seen. While he was secretary of state, his duties required that much of his time be spent in the air, travelling from place to place. It was his contention that his bridge game always suffered whenever he played at altitudes lower than 30,000 feet.

He played today's deal at ground level some years ago. Looking at his play objectively, I can detect no evidence of a diminution of ability or skill.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

After the opening diamond lead had been captured by Rusk's ace, he cashed the ace and king of trumps. Next came his six of diamonds, West winning with the 10-spot.

The 10 of clubs was then led, South taking with his king. Another club was now led to the board's ace, after which a third club was played, East's jack winning the trick.

If East now played back either a diamond or a club, Rusk's contract would have been assured. Had either suit been returned, South would have discarded his three of spades, while ruffing the trick in dummy. From here in, Rusk's only loser would have been a spade.

So East had no choice but to lead a spade, and Rusk played the three-spot, West's queen winning. A spade return by West now enabled declarer to make two spade tricks.

Had Rusk ever led the spade suit himself, he would have lost two spade tricks. If, for example, he had led dummy's jack, East would have covered with the king, and South's ace would have won. West's Q-9 would then have taken two spade tricks.

And so Rusk set up an end-play situation, forcing the opponents to lead spades to him. Thus he made sure of losing just one spade trick.

Susan put some money on the table. "This was in your coat pocket," she said. "Exactly $14.68."

"That's right, Mom," replied Eddie. "It's for the hospital fund. All the kids in my class paid. The boys all gave the same, but we let the girls pay a dime each less."

Dangerous Increase In Population

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

A press release from the Population Reference Bureau shows that at the current annual growth rate of about 2 per cent, the world will gain 72.6 million people in 1970. The increase will represent the difference between an estimated 123.4 million births and 50.8 million deaths.

The human family is at present gaining about 1.4 million members a week, or 119,014 a day. In the five-year period between July 1, 1965, and July 1, 1970, the world population will have grown by 343 million people.

What worries experts today is that in certain countries, the yearly population percentage increase is so high. For instance, in Kuwait it is 8.3 per cent in a year, and in Costa Rica it is 3.8 per cent.

In Costa Rica the per-capita gross national product is a modest $410, which is above average for Central America. Because of its rapid population growth, almost half of the people of Costa Rica are under 15 years of age, compared with the United States, where 30 per cent are under 15, and Sweden, where only 21 per cent are under 15.

The slowest-growing countries are East Germany and Hungary, where the population increases only 0.3 per cent and 0.4 per cent a year respectively. Curiously, East Germany has a high death rate, probably because so many young East Germans migrated to the West after the Second World War.

Of the major regions of the world, Africa has the highest vital rates; Dahomey, for example, ranks first in birth rate, and is tied with Burundi for the second highest death rate. East Germany, Sweden and Luxembourg have the world's lowest birth rates.

For 11 years, the birth rate of the U.S. dropped, but it has now risen slightly, probably due to the fact that the females born during the Second World War baby boom are now having children of their own. Whether the birth rate continues to go up, however, will depend on the preference of Americans for larger families. Sweden and Norway have the world's lowest infant mortality rates, with an average of 13 deaths per year per 1,000 children under the age of one.

What is frightening is that if the world's population keeps growing at the present rate, it will reach four billion in 1975, five billion in 1986 and six billion in 1995.

The fastest-growing populations are in Latin America. For instance, Middle America (Mexico and six Central American countries) has a yearly increase of 3.4 per cent. What is sad is that some of these rapidly growing countries, with their high birth rates and high infant mortality and low or declining death rates have largely inadequate diets, low levels of income, much illiteracy, and an economically dependent group comprising about two-fifths of the total population.

In some of those countries the situation is getting rather frightening. These countries can double in population in 24 years: Africa's population can double in 27 years, Asia's population in 31 years.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Wily Ben Franklin Foiled at Parley

By BOB BOWMAN

Britain nearly gave Canada to the U.S. as part of the peace treaty that ended the American Revolutionary War. Benjamin Franklin was the leading negotiator for the U.S. and put up a strong argument that it was risky to retain British territory on the American border. It might just lead to another war. Some members of the British government were convinced and there was a secret deal in the cabinet to accept Franklin's proposals.

However, Secretary of Foreign Affairs Charles Fox was opposed and suspected that he was not being kept informed about the negotiations. On May 8, 1782, he sent his own agent to Paris, where Richard Oswald was dealing with Franklin. Oswald knew nothing about North America and was no match for wily Franklin.

There was a cabinet row when Fox learned the truth and he was excluded from a new government that was formed with Lord Shelburne as prime minister. Shelburne had been in favor of the U.S. getting Canada and it looked as though the deal would go through.

The tide suddenly turned when the British government received a message from Admiral Rodney that he had defeated the French fleet in the West Indies. This strengthened the British position at the conference table and it was decided to retain Canada when the peace treaty was finally signed in September, 1783.

During the American Revolutionary War, Britain had also been fighting France and Spain in Europe, and was glad to see the end of hostilities even if it meant the loss of the American colonies. It is interesting to speculate how the course of world events might have been changed if the U.S. had acquired Canada in 1783.

Other events on May 8:

1604 — Champlain landed near present-day Lahave, N.S.

1756 — Indians attacked Mahone Bay, N.S., as reprisal for expulsion of Acadians.

MANY OTHER ISSUES ALSO DEBATED

Wages Are Only One Part of Postal Iceberg

OTTAWA (CP) — The wage issue in the contract dispute between the government and postal employees is only part of the iceberg.

The question is: Which part, the tip above the surface or the bulk below?

The three-man conciliation board appointed in March to deal with the dispute was asked to consider 21 items which the government felt should be included in a collective agreement and 25 submitted by the Council of Postal Unions.

In its report, made public Thursday, the one main point of agreement among members of the board was that they found it "unfortunate that the parties failed to settle during their negotiations many of these relatively minor demands."

The board was able to recommend unanimously acceptance of some compromise proposals and to find sufficient common ground in other issues to urge both parties to return to negotiation.

But apart from wages there remain many differences and the biggest is the matter of job security.

AUTOMATION PLANNED

Postmaster-General Eric Kierans has shown he is determined to improve the efficiency of the operation. Planned is the introduction of automated techniques to streamline mail-handling and possibly even re-establishment of the post office as a Crown corporation.

To the unions, such plans mean the threat of job dislocation and a possible loss of income for their members.

In a minority opinion filed with the conciliation report, the labor representative stated that a new contract "should contain a provision that work normally done by employees should continue to be done by them, and not assigned to others."

Mr. Walsh also attacked legislation governing relations in the public service for restricting negotiations from dealing with a demand for protection "from layoffs anticipated from technological changes."

The government position, set out by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury at a news conference Thursday, is that the post office is ready to discuss fully the effects of all innovations with the unions and to provide ample notice of any dislocations that might result.

It is also ready to provide job retraining for displaced workers, he said.

NEGOTIATOR BALKS

The trouble, added treasury board negotiator Cecil Harper, is that the unions want an "iron-clad guarantee" of jobs.

In his minority opinion, Mr. Walsh also protested that public employees are unable to bargain about such matters as pensions.

"Government employees are prevented from bargaining effectively for modest improvements in pensions by a Parliament which grabbed off for it own members most generous and enviable pensions and superannuation provisions."

Mr. Drury's reply is that the government cannot tolerate the confusion that would result from separate pensions schemes for each of 72 units within the public service: It would be an almost insurmountable administrative problem.

Money is involved in other issues by way of compensation for the particular inconveniences associated with work in the post office.

Mr. Walsh's minority recommendation on hours of work and overtime would add a nickel to the existing 15-cent-an-hour night shift premium and provide for overtime pay after an eight hour shift rather than after 40 hours a week.

The post office maintains such an arrangement would enable workers to obtain overtime pay on Mondays when a bulk of mail is processed and have little to do during regular working hours later in the week.

Other matters at issue include: Extra vacation pay for workers unable to take their holidays during the summer months; benefits for part-time letter carriers; payment by the employer of 50 per cent of medical insurance premiums; and sick leave provisions.

DETENTION HOME LACK GIVEN AS REASON

More Juveniles Face Jail Terms

By PETER McNELLY

The provincial attorney-general's department Thursday told the Family and Children's Service it will raise more juvenile cases to adult court because of the lack of juvenile delinquent care facilities here.

The result will be that more sentences for juvenile offences will be served in adult jails and prisons.

The Family and Children's Service was advised of the policy change in a letter from the attorney-general's office.

The attorney-general's department has the authority to raise juvenile cases to adult court under the federal Juvenile Delinquent Act.

Under current provincial legislation, young people aged 12 to 19 found guilty in juvenile court here are sentenced into the care of the Family and Children's Service, placed on probation or fined.

In 1968, amendments to the provincial Protection of Children Act gave responsibility for developing juvenile delinquent treatment facilities to children's aid societies where they exist. In Victoria, this is the F and CS. There are two other children's aid societies in Vancouver.

Social Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi said this morning the province has adequate juvenile delinquent treatment facilities and is developing more.

"We have a cabinet committee working on this problem all the time," he said. "I don't understand what the attorney-general's department is talking about."

Gaglardi said there is no place in the world which has facilities to handle certain kinds of young offenders. He said the attorney-general's department may have made the decision in an attempt to provide facilities for what he called "certain types of erring individuals."

He did not elaborate on the meaning of his term. Gaglardi said his department is continuing plans for construction of a young offenders unit in Sooke to complement existing treatment programs.

When told of the attorney-general's department intention to refer more juvenile cases to adult court, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said, "this is an unbelievable admission of their own inadequacy."

Barrett, who is also a social worker, said the provincial government first avoided direct responsibility for the care of juveniles when it passed the 1968 amendments permitting the private agencies to develop programs to supervise and rehabilitate young offenders.

WRIGHT
. . . condemns move

F and CS Executive Director Gordon Wright condemned the attorney-general's department decision as "a thoroughly destructive undertaking."

Wright said moving more juvenile cases to adult court will only result in more juveniles going to jail. "That any adolescent at any point should have to be imprisoned suggests a failure of society's resources," he said.

He said it does no good to take juvenile delinquents outside the community and put them in what he termed prison's "fake society."

The F and CS is planning to enlarge its treatment facilities by setting up special group homes for delinquents in Greater Victoria. The first will open in the next six months and three more will be established during the next 18 months.

A spokesman in the attorney-general's department this morning said lack of juvenile treatment facilities is a problem not only in Victoria but throughout the province.

He said the department's decision is not a criticism of children's aid societies in Victoria and Vancouver. The decision to refer more juvenile cases to adult court will be applied throughout British Columbia, the spokesman said.

The 1968 amendments to the Protection of Children Act, he said, anticipated development of treatment facilities. These facilities have developed slowly, necessitating the department's decision, he said.

Wright said the intention of the amendments was to provide an alternative to jailing, even though they allow children's aid societies to send a juvenile to jail if necessary.

Wright agrees this sometimes has to happen, but he said he does not think private agencies such as the F and CS should have this power.

"The power to send a person to prison should not be in the hands of a private agency but

'HAWKS' INVADE N.Y. CITY HALL

NEW YORK (AP)—More than 1,000 young men, many of them construction workers expressing opposition to Mayor John V. Lindsay's anti-war sentiments, stormed city hall today, clashing with police and student peace demonstrators.

The workers, six of them carrying American flags, swarmed into City Hall Park chanting, "Raise that flag."

Lindsay, who had ordered city flags at half staff in memory of the four slain Kent State University, Ohio, students, was downtown attending an anti-war rally.

Work-to-Rule At Columbian

The British Columbia Hospital Employees Union Thursday night began a work-to-rule campaign at Royal Columbian Hospital to protest staff layoffs.

The hospital board decided to cut staff by 50 because of austerity measures instituted by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark. Vice-chairman Dr. R. D. MacNeill, quit in protest.

Meanwhile, hospital director R. B. Thomson Thursday posted a notice to staff saying the quality and quantity of care at the hospital will suffer because of the cuts.

His notice formally advised staff there will be layoffs but gave no details. Medical director R. G. Foulkes, however, said the 50 will include 26 nurses and eight other medical employees.

The union, with 550 members at RCH before staff cuts were announced, said it will post information pickets around the hospital next week. The union has 8,000 members in the province.

RCH board chairman Jack Biggs said the staff laid off will not qualify for unemployment insurance benefits because the provincial government has never agreed to pay a share of contributions.

"In the light of what has happened at RCH," he said, "I think it would be fair of the government to change this policy."

A press release Thursday night outlined service cuts.

—Visting hours, presently from 2-8 p.m., will be 7-8 p.m., except for close relatives.

—Admissions and discharges will be closely regulated; patients will be required to leave promptly in the morning so their bed may be used the same afternoon.

—Non-essential operations, such as plastic surgery, will not be performed on weekends.

—Electro-shock treatment for psychiatric patients will be ended and patients referred to Hollywood or Riverview hospitals.

—The number of doctors on staff, about 200, may be reduced in the fall when additions to Surrey Memorial hospital are completed.

—Out-patient fees, cost of private and semi-private rooms and meal prices in the staff cafeteria will all increase.

Middle-Age Vigilantes Hit, Spray Students

SEATTLE (AP) — Groups of middle-aged vigilantes swinging clubs indiscriminantly against students and spraying youths with a chemical substance reportedly roamed the University of Washington campus Thursday night while police and anti-war demonstrators fought on its fringes.

A person identifying himself as Michael Templeton, a UW graduate student in physics, said he "got three or four licks" with that he called "nightsticks or billy clubs" and said they were wielded by a group of 10-15 men. Templeton didn't describe the extent of his injuries.

A Seattle Post-Intelligencer news team said it saw one band of about 12 men in civilian clothes and armed with clubs.

Capital Awaits Rally; Million Students Strike

By HAYNES JOHNSON
The Washington Post

An air of crisis, growing out of events in Cambodia and on American campuses, confronted the U.S. today as the country braced for massive protest demonstrations.

The dimensions of the trouble were reflected in a number of extraordinary events:

● Hundreds of colleges and universities, affecting about a million students, were closed in the first general student strike in the nation's history;

● Hundreds of thousands of citizens began gathering for demonstrations scheduled across the U.S. from the nation's capital to California. In Washington, officials were preparing for more than 100,000 demonstrators and troops were alerted;

● In College Park, Md., the scene of recent turmoil, 900 faculty members and 5,000 students were occupying Cole Field House Thursday night, defying an order to close the university;

● National guardsmen were alerted to stand by in all states to watch over armories and thwart possible acts of arson or violence. Guard units remained in position on five campuses.

● President Nixon summoned the governors of all 50 states to meet him Monday in the White House. They will discuss "the disruption of peace, violence and potential violence throughout the nation," it was announced;

● A Republican governor's conference was cancelled because of conditions. The 13 governors who had come to Santa Fe, New Mexico, were being protected by the state guard before the conference was cancelled.

Many attempted to explain the present unrest. New York's Mayor John Lindsay spoke of the United States being on the verge of a "physical breakdown."

A cabinet officer, Health Secretary Robert Finch, attributed what he called a "national crisis" to the American intervention in Cambodia. That, he said, was the "straw that broke the camel's back."

The immediate causes were President Nixon's announcement of one week ago that the U.S. was sending troops into Cambodia, triggering fears of a wider Asian war, and the slaying of four Kent State students in a clash with national guardsmen Monday.

At the White House, the president and officials have taken new moves to ease tensions. After Nixon was severely criticized for his remarks last Friday calling college protesters "bums," official actions have been conciliatory.

2 STUDENTS SHOT DEAD IN CARACAS

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Two students were shot to death and three others were wounded Thursday in rioting that followed a demonstration against U.S. intervention in Cambodia. Police denied opening fire on the protestors.

Meanwhile, in the United States, memorial services were held for the four students shot dead at Kent University. See Page 3.

Communists Batter Northern Provinces

Times News Services

The Indochina war erupted with renewed fury today as the Communists battered South Vietnam's northernmost provinces with rockets and mortars and battled in the streets in two provincial capitals.

In the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia, a South Vietnamese force was hi hard in heavy fighting.

Convoy Must Pass Through Reds

The flotilla must first pass through 30 miles of river controlled by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces.

As 30,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops continued their drive against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bases and supply depots in Cambodia, the guerrillas shelled 64 bases and towns in South Vietnam.

Da Nang, the country's second largest city, and two other provincial capitals just to the south, Hoi An and Tam Ky, were hit hardest. North Vietnamese commandos battled into the streets of Hoi An and Tam Ky, raiding government supply depots.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 75 were killed and 83 wounded in the attacks on the three cities and the mining of a bus south of Da Nang.

Thirty-one guerrillas were reported killed.

Anniversary Of French Defeat

The new attacks came on the heels of the 16th anniversary Thursday of the French defeat at Dien Bien Phu. In its observance of the occasion, Hanoi called on the Vietnamese people to intensify their fight against the United States.

At least 17 U.S. units or installations were attacked with mortars and rockets. The U.S. command said two Americans were killed and 33 wounded.

Headquarters claimed 3,865 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops now have been killed and thousands of tons of equipment and food seized in the half dozen operations in Cambodia since April 29.

Losses so far were put at 49 American and 237 South Vietnamese troops killed and 148 U.S. and 1,051 South Vietnamese troops wounded. Ten American helicopters have been lost.

In the big battle north of Svay Rieng, a South Vietnamese medical officer with the force said 50 government troops were killed and 200 wounded, some of them by their own artillery.

The casualties were the highest reported for government forces in a single action since the U.S. and South Vietnam launched operations against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps inside Cambodia last week.

A South Vietnamese communique reported that 79 Communist troops were killed and 15 captured, including a battalion commander, in fighting Thursday.

A battalion of about 500 South Vietnamese riding tanks and armored personnel carriers was pursuing a Viet Cong battalion. The South Vietnamese slammed into Viet Cong positions in heavy treelines, which were being bombarded by government artillery to soften them up. Some artillery barrages plas-

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM CHALLENGED

Mailmen Test Ottawa Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury left little doubt Thursday that the federal government is banking its anti-inflation program on a final test of wills with 27,000 postal workers.

The two sides in the contract dispute are well apart from the compromise wage settlement proposed by Judge Rene Lippe of Montreal in a conciliation board report which split three ways on the issue.

The report was made public Thursday. At a news conference, Mr. Drury said the government felt its wage offer "has been adequate."

The government offer would increase wages for postal workers by 16.1 per cent in a 30-month period ending April 1, 1972.

The demand of the Council of Postal Unions is for a two-year contract, expiring Sept. 30, 1971, which would raise wages by 23.3 per cent. The last postal contract expired Oct. 1, 1969.

Judge Lippe's proposal would have increased the base rate in the post office over the 30-month period by 19.4 per cent to $3.07 from $2.57 an hour. The top rate among those in dispute is now $3.23 an hour.

OTTAWA NEXT FOR CLAIM SAY NISHGAS

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A British Columbia Indian tribe's claim to 4,800 square miles of land in the northern section of the province will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada, the tribe said today.

The Nishga tribe's claim was rejected Thursday for a second time when the B.C. Appeal Court upheld an earlier ruling by the B.C. Supreme Court.

"The case definitely will be going to the Supreme Court of Canada," the president of the Nishga Tribal Council, Frank Calder, said today. Calder is NDP member for Atlin in the B.C. legislature.

under the protection of the law."

Barrett said he agrees with Wright, that the power to send people to jail should remain with the courts.

This spring, in the legislature, Barrett introduced amendments to the Protection of Children Act which would have required yearly reviews of juveniles sentenced into the care of children's aid societies.

The amendments were defeated.

The attorney-general's department spokesmann said Victoria needs a small detention centre for juveniles.

But the F and CS is making plans for special group homes specifically designed to handle juvenile delinquents.

F and CS directors this week approved the hiring of a supervisor to direct the program. Wright said that when the four homes are open they will be able to handle a total of 32 young offenders.

Wright said there are several reasons behind the new program:

The F and CS assumed entire responsibility in February for developing juvenile treatment facilities for the Victoria area.

There is no longer available space at Brannan Lake and Willingdon for juveniles who cannot be placed with their families, in foster homes, Sevenoaks or existing group homes.

Existing F and CS programs need expansion.

The alternative is to construct a local jail for juveniles.

Under current programs the F and CS has not emphasized detention of juveniles. Wright said a study of 45 juveniles handled by his organization last year showed 10 were placed in group homes, 19 were discharged or sent back to their families, 12 were sent to training schools (now called 'child care resource centres') and four were sent to correctional institutes.

Asked if the shift of more juvenile cases into adult court will affect F and CS plans, Wright said: "We have been absorbing and planning for a greater number of adolescents. This will have no effect on what we're doing."

Wright said there is nothing the F and CS can do about the attorney-general's department decision.

"I think we can do something, but whether this community will let us do it is another question."

He said he is disturbed by the lack of co-ordination in juvenile delinquent programs between the attorney-general's department and the social welfare department.

"This decision will harm juveniles in the province for a long time to come," Wright said.

with the report, the unions council announced it will ask union members to authorize strike action in a vote set for May 19.

The council stated it is willing to resume negotiations with the treasury board but warned that postal workers will not accept an agreement that does not include a "good increase" and provisions for job security.

It added that the minority ompinion filed by labor consultant William Walsh of Hamilton, Ont., could well become "the strike manifesto of the postal workers."

Copies of the conciliation report are being printed in both French and English and will be distributed to all union members within the next week.

The government position set out in the report by Keith Campbell, a vice-pre-president of Canadian Pacific Railway, is that the present economic climate demands "the utmost restraint in the amount of the wage increase that should be either sought by the employees or granted by the employer."

CALLS IT 'UNREALISTIC'

In sharp contrast, Mr. Walsh said "it would be unrealistic to expect the 27,000 postal employees . . . to accept less favorable wage adjustments than are generally being achieved."

Mr. Drury said the government's offer is in line with settlements negotiated with other elements of the public service—most of which have waived the right to strike.

The government is seeking a relatively long-term contract to enable the post office to introduce needed changes, he said. It would not offer a quick settlement that would bring the parties back to the bargaining table within a year to consider the effects of anti-inflation efforts.

At the same time, the government was not prepared to pay an inflated price for the tail-end of a 30-month or three-year agreement. The unions would have to trust that government policies will effectively control the cost of living.

tered the South Vietnamese troops instead.

The Viet Cong opened fire from all sides with rocket grenades and machine-guns. Within a few minutes, South Vietnamese dead and wounded littered the fields.

Some civilian casualties also were reported, but no count was available.

To the northeast, U.S. troops probed for the fourth day through a bunker system described by the White House Thursday as "a major sophisticated base complex" that might be the headquarters of the supreme Communist command.

But field officers said they had no evidence that the headquarters itself had been found and the equipment in the bunkers was not particularly sophisticated.

The base is in the Fishhook region of Cambodia. It was two miles wide and a mile long, and contained about 50 earthen bunkers filled with hundreds of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food. The searchers also found the ruins of a classroom-type building with a capacity for 150 persons.

EIGHT KILLED

Other U.S. troops operating farther to the northeast in Cambodia ran into heavy North Vietnamese fire, and eight Americans were killed, the U.S. command said. It was the most American deaths reported in a single action in Cambodian operations.

Headquarters said 24 North Vietnamese troops were killed in the fight.

Tug Owners 'Vindicated' By Remarks

B.C. Towboat Owners Association today said it has been vindicated by remarks of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey in its stand against striking employees, members of Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

The guild, in its sixth day of a strike that idled most of some 400 towboats operated by association members, earlier found support for its action from the labor minister.

The association said the owners position was completely vindicated by remarks in Ottawa by Mackasey Thursday, including:

"Because it was a unanimous conciliation board report, I frankly would have expected labor to find other ways of settling this dispute rather than going on strike. The government will not attempt to have safety regulations written into the contract. Management has been very fair in this dispute," the minister was quoted.

REFERENCE TO WAGES

The reference was to recommendations for a wage increase, but the guild also wants safety, manning and accommodation provision written into the contract, which were recommended in a separate government report.

The BCTOA said the minister had made his position clear, and was saying in effect what the association had said from the outset. "that there is absolutely no justification for the present strike by the guild, that the association cannot legislate safety in this industry, that this responsibility lies with the department of transport."

Nerve Gas Precautions 'Adequate'

A senior planner with the Emergency Measures Organization in Ottawa said today government officials are "very satisfied" with precautions Americans are taking on a planned shipment of deadly nerve gas from Okinawa through Juan de Fuca Strait to a storage depot in Oregon.

R. L. Rutherford added that after the shipment reaches Bangor, Wash., "it poses no danger to Canadians."

B. J. Perry from the defence research board said the only possible danger to Canada would occur if there was an explosion aboard ship and material thrown into the air. This would require an explosion in excess of 500 tons of TNT.

The Weather and You

I was glad to walk down to Jeff's place this morning to call on the old Wyoming cowboy and see how he was doing after his mild heart attack. He was feeling good. He said he would be back in the saddle in a few days and exercising his seven horses. His wife winked at me behind his back, as though to signal "maybe."

Jeff then reminisced about his days on the old Flying U Bar before he retired, and as usual he brought the weather into it. "One thng a cowboy knows," he said, "is that when the night sky is going to be overcast after a pretty cool day in the spring, the temperature for sleeping by the fire a day's ride from the home ranch is going to be warmer.

"A cowboy doesn't mind sleeping out in all kinds of weather in the spring and summer, if he has a little shelter, but he'd rather be in the bunkhouse on a clear night. In the spring that night will be cold and maybe frosty."

Too Much East At West Meet Criticized

By JIM NEAVES

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — While the One Prairie Province conference doesn't get under way until Sunday it already has been criticized for being loaded with easterners.

A. M. Harradence, a Calgary lawyer who heads the New West Task Force, says he's afraid they will bring eastern Canadian prejudice with them.

He said he will be at the conference which runs until Wednesday, but he's afraid political realignment of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba would weaken the voice of the West.

"If there were only one voting bloc with one or two weak voices, we'd be pretty easy for the others to deal with. . . . I wonder why the conference doesn't include more Western Canadians in its program?"

Mr. Harradence and his group thinks separation may be the only workable solution to Western problems, but regrets people think he is solely interested in separatism.

"Separatism is a last desperate measure, but if it seems to be the only viable solution to our problems then we'll have to fully consider it."

There is no hint of discussion of western separatism on the program, but the issue—fanned by increasing feelings of alienation in Western Canada—may be difficult to avoid.

Mr. Harradence said the West is fighting discriminatory tariffs and freight rates, a discriminatory oil policy and eastern apathy toward the West.

"We're taking the same drubbing now that we've been taking practically since Confederation," he said.

"Separatist feelings are running pretty close to the surface here and one of our concerns is that we don't arouse or fan this emotion without a solid core of facts on which to base it."

Possibility of 5-Province Canada Kicked Around by Federal Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal cabinet ministers have discussed, though not as government policy, the consolidation of the 10 provinces into five, informed sources say.

The four Atlantic provinces would become one and the three Prairie provinces another single unit.

Veterans Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, New Brunswick representative in the cabinet, has personally endorsed the single-province Atlantic concept in a public speech.

Supply Minister James Richardson, from Manitoba, is expected to do the same for the Prairies in a speech at Lethbridge Sunday night.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, from Alberta, and Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand will also be in Lethbridge to attend a conference on the subject "One prairie province? A question for Canada."

The conference is being sponsored by the University of Lethbridge and the Lethbridge Herald and is expected to attract about 300 economists, businessmen, educationists, administrators and provincial and federal politicians.

It is understood that Mr. Richardson even has a name for the proposed one prairie province but he is saying that for his speech opening the Sunday-to-Wednesday meeting.

Though ministers here have discussed creation of single provinces in the Atlantic and prairie regions as a method of shifting some power from central Ontario and Quebec, there is no government policy as such on the matter, informants said.

This is considered an issue strictly for the provinces themselves.

Supporters of one prairie province would also like to ring in British Columbia but, for the moment, are confining their advocacy to Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba as a single political entity.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have for some time been looking at the possibility of political union and there is some thought that Newfoundland might be included in a single "Atlantis."

Backers of the idea of one prairie province see advantages other than legislative and administrative.

For instance, informants say, they see the possibility of a single prairie region taking responsibility for grain production and marketing instead of leaving this task in federal hands.

One source close to the cabinet said not a single cabinet minister is opposed to the idea of five provinces, though some are not wildly enthusiastic.

Prime Minister Trudeau is among the ministers who has discussed the idea informally.

Lang Accused Of Misleading

OTTAWA (CP) — Minutes after announcing a $20,000,000 wheat sale to Peru, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, was in trouble Thursday.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) charged in the Commons that Mr. Lang "told a deliberate lie" two hours before the announcement in telling the House he didn't plan to make a statement.

"No," Mr. Lang had replied, when asked by Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) whether he intended "to make a statement this afternoon."

Mr. Horner asserted that Mr. Lang had "deliberately misled" the House, then had gone upstairs to sign the sales agreement with the ambassador from Peru.

BARELY DENT

Champagne flowed and flashbulbs popped at the formal signing ceremony, although the 10,300,000-bushel sale will barely dent Canadian stockpiles of 1,000,000,000 bushels.

Mr. Horner's question of privilege was rejected after Mr. Lang explained that he thought Mr. Mazankowski was asking whether there would be a statement in the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said it appeared to be a misunderstanding on all sides.

However, he didn't force Mr. Horner to withdraw the word "lie." A few days ago, Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) withdrew a similar remark at the request of the Speaker.

Under the terms of the wheat sale, Peru will buy 7,400,000 bushels now and a further 2,900,000 during a 12-month delivery period up to June 30, 1971.

Irish Cabinet Reshuffled

DUBLIN (Reuters) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch announced today a cabinet reshuffle to fill the gaps created by his dismissal of two ministers for alleged gun-running.

The ousting of the ministers earlier this week caused one of Ireland's biggest political sensations since the troubles of the 1920s.

Finance Minister Charles Haughey and Agriculture Minister Neil Blaney were accused of trying to smuggle in arms for use in trouble-torn, British-controlled Northern Ireland.

The new finance minister is George Colley, former minister for industry and commerce. The ministry of agriculture went to James Gibbons, promoted from the ranks.

Other appointments:

Defence minister—Gerard Cronin, former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for postal services—Gerry Collins, also a former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for local government—Robert Molloy, a former parliamentary secretary.

Saanich Mayor Calls Hydro Head 'Poorly Informed'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today a letter to the Victoria Daily Times from B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum is "saturated with inaccuracies."

He commented: "For the head of a provincial corporation to be so completely poorly informed as his letter reveals is clearly beyond belief."

Shrum, in a letter to the Times published Thursday, asked whether overhead power lines or sewage disposal has priority in Saanich, said he is "certain" Curtis would do something about sewer problems "if he had the money."

Shrum also said that "if" a sewage system is installed, ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay. He asked whether "construction of a sewage system that would stop the pollution of Gorge waters by septic tank seepage from Saanich" would have a higher priority than undergrounding a line across the Gorge.

Curtis said the removal of raw sewage has been and remains Saanich's highest priority.

And this is being accomplished, he said, through a four-year program of extension of sewers to 3,400 acres (three-quarters the land size of Victoria city) and through trunk line and outfall work by the Capital Regional District.

The district, he pointed out, has already awarded the first contracts for work at the Macaulay Point outfall, located in Esquimalt and serving Esquimalt, parts of Victoria and much of the sewered and to-be-sewered areas of Saanich.

This rebuilt outfall will extend 6,100 feet into the sea instead of the present few feet, he said.

SHRUM
. . . 'if'

In addition, the Pollution Control Board of B.C. had granted a permit for the work and a special monitoring committee — including public health specialists and doctors and other — established to study water quality.

The PCB approval was on an experimental three-year basis to see if a treatment plant is necessary.

Curtis said there are no septic tanks in Saanich along the Gorge. The area has had sewers for 15 year, he said.

The reference to "seepage" was incorrect, although he acknowledged there is some flow down the Colquitz.

He pointed to last month's report, The Gorge Waterway, by Saanich design engineer Frank Neate.

In that report, Neate drew on pollution tests which suggested pollution in the Gorge was due to sanitary sewers emptying into the Inner Harbor in Victoria city (to be cleaned up under the approved city capital budget).

Neate said it is reasonable to conclude that organisms originating in Victoria Harbor travel into the inlet as far as Craigflower Bridge and highly likely they contribute to contamination in Portage Inlet.

CURTIS
. . . not if

The pollution tests showed water quality relatively high in Portage Inlet, decreasing from there to the harbor.

Curtis said not only has council identified and established sewerage as the top priority, but the public did so as well when it voted 80 per cent in favor of the sewerage enterprise referendum in 1968.

This enterprise covers the sewered and to-be-sewered areas in the current four-year plan. Work has already started in one area and sewers will connect with Macaulay regional lines when they are completed later this year.

"Our people have identified the problem and have committed their dollars," Curtis said.

To Shrum's reference that "if" a sewage system is to be installed ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay, Curtis said simply: "They have already done so."

HIGH-WIRE PROTESTER SEEKS ISLAND SUPPORT

Pat Codyre, who is fighting to prevent the B.C. Hydro from taking over his and four other homes on Munn Road intends to enlist the whole of Vancouver Island in his battle.

At a meeting in St. Joseph's Church Hall Thursday he said he would form groups both here and up-Island in a bid to prevent installation of overhead transmission lines.

Several Duncan and Sidney residents were in the audience of 50.

Codyre pointed out that elected officials on municipal councils were helpless to control B.C. Hydro, which is not an elected body.

"This is a mockery of democracy."

In support, Ald. Alan Newberry said B.C. Hydro has more power than the provincial government.

"This is the only body in the entire province that doesn't have to come to municipal council for zoning approval on a project," he said.

Regional Police, Firemen Urged by City Alderman

By JIM HUME

A plea for the unification of all area police and fire-fighting forces was made this afternoon by Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson.

The alderman said he wants to see one police force and one fire-fighting force providing protection for at least the four core municipalities.

He asked council to endorse a move which would see Victoria spearhead discussions with Municipal Affirs Minister Dan Campbell to "seek his advice and assistance in bringing about the unification of all police and fire-fighting forces in this area as soon as possible, via the regional district, or in any other way possible."

NOT ENOUGH

Olafson, while expecting to win sympathetic council support for his move, could run into criticism from other municipalities.

In the past the municipalities surrounding Victoria have been against unified police and fire departments.

But Olafson says parochial rejection of the proposal is not enough to satisfy him.

"That is why I want to go to the minister to seek his guidance and assistance," he said this morning. "I feel the time has come when we must stop shying away from what is so obviously a regional problem."

ALREADY STARTED

Olafson said local governments had already accepted the fact that sewers, hospitals and public health services were matters of regional concern.

"Crime doesn't recognize municipal boundaries, neither does fire," he said. "It's beyond me why we haven't long ago come to grips with the matter."

During the interview Olafson said he is not advocating unification to save money nor with the object being staff reductions.

"We might save a little money, but that isn't what I'm looking for," he said. "What unification would do is give the taxpayers much better value than they now receive."

Olafson said his appeal to the minister for action is not to be construed as a criticism of any local police or fire-fighting force.

BETTER PROTECTION

"We get excellent police and fire protection," he said. "But I can't for the life of me see how we can justify four administrations, four sets of dispatchers, for different systems for each of the municipalities.

"Centrally-controlled fire and police departments obviously provide better protection for the public at large."

Olafson said he expected criticism for his move.

"Change from the old ways is never easy," he said.

At noon Olafson was still unsure of what support he would get from fellow council members, but he said he expected favorable reaction from most.

TRAINING SCHOOL

And he knows he has the support of Ald. Peter Pollen.

In budget talks ealier this week, Pollen left no doubt that he favored the regionalization of police and fire protective services.

He made his stand known when he suggested that the Victoria fire training centre, approved in the capital budget vote, should be an area-wide training school.

In 1970 the Victoria police department budget has been estimated at $1,350,229.

The fire department is expected to spend $1,107,070.

In Saanich fire protection this year will cost $758,300 while police protection will cost the taxpayer $837,900 plus $15,385 in capital expenditures.

"There has to be a way to streamline these services," Olafson said. "And there has to be a way to hold cost in line while providing better value for the tax dollar."

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me when and where this year's Couchiching Conference will be held and what subject discussed?—W.B.

A. The Couchiching Conference will again be held at Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching, eight miles northwest of Orillia, Ontario, from July 15 to July 31. This year's subject is unknown.

200 Men Laid Off Here As Strike Closes Mill

Work stopped at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice sawmill this morning. The 200-man plant was being shut down this afternoon after "hot" logs reached the slipway from a boom branded by striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

Company manager Walter Nelson said there could be sufficient logs on hand for the 400-employee Victoria sawmill division, adjacent to the Point Ellice unit, to continue operating until Monday.

But he thought it likely the company would seek a court injunction Monday to restrain International Woodworkers of America members employed by BCFP from refusing to handle hot logs.

He said there appeared to be no further use in trying to get CMSG to lift the hot label from a two-week supply of logs stored in West Bay.

By tonight it was thought some 4,000 mill and woods workers would be out of jobs due to the CMSG strike preventing the normal flow of logs, booms, barges and scows used by the forest industry on the west coast.

'Gentle' Dog Castrated While on Daily Romp

A casual afternoon run for a purebred Irish Setter turned into a horror story for a Central Saanich dog lover Thursday.

The four-year-old dog, owned by Trevor Hughes of 1934 Hovey Road, is in critical condition in an animal hospital today after being castrated by an unknown person.

Paddy, worth $125 as a pup, returned home after a two-hour absence exhausted, in deep shock and bleeding profusely.

"I have no idea who would do such a thing," Hughes said. "The dog was gentle and affectionate."

He said the castration had been done by someone who knew the technique used for operations on domestic farm animals.

"The operation was obviously done cleanly and efficiently, but it was done the wrong way for a dog. Paddy's life is just touch and go at this point — he's lost so much blood. Whoever did it just cut him and turned him loose still bleeding."

Central Saanich police are investigating the incident and Hughes has offered a $50 reward for information leading to the arrest of the individual or individuals involved.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has matched the reward with a further $50.

'CONTEMPTIBLE' SAYS JUDGE

2½ Years in Baseball Theft

A man who stole $1,138 from the National Little League here was sentenced today to two-and-a-half years in the penitentiary.

In handing down sentence, Judge William Ostler described the action of Charles Buchanan, 41, as contemptible.

"While you were pretending to support this youth organization you were commiting this wretched theft," said the judge.

Buchanan committed the theft while serving as treasurer for the baseball group between April 9 and Aug. 30, 1968.

Buchanan also pleaded guilty to stealing $396 from the Victoria Mobile Homes Towing Ltd., in 1969, and a pistol from the Bank of Nova Scotia main branch where he worked until 1968.

LIBRARIANS STUDY MEDIA

B.C. librarians will meet at the University of Victoria Saturday and Sunday for a workshop-conference entitled Exploring the Media.

The event is jointly sponsored by the Association of B.C. Librarians and the Institute of Victoria Librarians.

Keynote speaker Saturday will be former UBC librarian L. A. Leaf, currently civilian training specialist at Canadian Forces Fleet School, Esquimalt. His presentation is entitled The Media Specialist and the Librarian.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EXCEPT ON THE MORE remote claims, today's logger is a commuter. He may ride to his operation in a crummy, but it travels on tires instead of flanged steel. His natural transition is from footloose young high-stepper to householder and family man.

The roads that lace our Vancouver Island woods did more than end the logger's isolation. They changed his life pattern to an extent that the typical Tame Ape of the railway shows wouldn't have believed possible.

There were married loggers before the quiet revolution. As a gesture to these, the big outfits provided married quarters and the equivalent of the little red schoolhouse. But the claims were essentially preserves for the unwedded male. Camp was his home and his community, and to it he returned after each fling in town.

Sometimes in city winters, I would spot a remembered face in a Vancouver restaurant or beer parlor.

His stake was spent. He had a hangover. And he was homesick for the ordered, monastic life of the logger in the woods.

He would talk about camp as if it were paradise lost. The cookhouse food he had heartily damned three weeks before was pretty hard to beat. Look at these sad little hotcakes: what wouldn't he give for a stack of honest sweat-pads and a cup of good coffee.

Sure, logging was a hard life, and if a sapling didn't get him, the haulback line would. But that life had its points . . . He'd go on in that vein until I was a little homesick too.

The place he yearned for was a scatteration of weathered frame structures mounted on log sleds and strung out along a railway siding.

There were the long, low bunkhouses ranged in rows. Fronting them were wooden catwalks chewed and pitted by boot calks. There was the saw filer's many-windowed shack down by the tracks, the cookhouse-dining hall, and the meat house raised well off the ground.

Next to the timekeeper's office was the camp commissary, universally called by another name unflattering to management. In the commissary, the logger could replenish his needs. Tickets charged against his time bought new rigging gloves, socks, toothpaste, soap, fine-cut tobacco or maybe dark and pungent snoose in a little round can.

This was painful spending. It meant that much less to take down next trip. Skyline Blondy, spendthrift in town, was determinedly thrifty in the woods.

Add a first-aid shack, toss in a water-tank where the chunky logging locomotives paused to drink. And there, more or less, was the woods camp of a railway show flung down in a few acres of logging burn.

It had no real permanence. When it had served its function in one area, its buildings would travel by rail to make a little town elsewhere.

Its population was by no means permanent, either. A main tenet of logger philosophy was that a man should be free to go or stay as he chose.

So each steamer day, there was a coming and going — a man or two heading for the beach, and others arriving to make a stake.

The camp bedmaker, a logger himself before the years caught up with him, would assign the newcomer to a bunkhouse. His bed was a steel-framed cot with grey woollen blankets and clean white sheets. But with suitcase under the bed, packsack hung on a spike and small gear in a butter box nailed to the wall, he was back where Skyline Blondy yearned to be.

At home, that is, and ready to go to work. Give him a day, and he would be grumbling cheerfully about the lunchmaker's stinginess and the stupidities of the sidepush.

He was back in the woods, and it would be months before the city, with his enthusiastic co-operation, got a chance to pluck him again.

TRUSTEE TELLS BRUCH:

School Switch Won't Work

A member of the Greater Victoria school board has dismissed Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch's suggested solution to problems at Vic West elementary.

Bruch said some children could be sent to three Esquimalt schools as an alternative to using Vic West elementary's ailing 62-year-old main building.

Trustee Allan McKinnon says there will not be enough room at Lampson St., Macaulay and Rockheights in September for children from the six classrooms at Vic West.

McKinnon said Brush based his suggestion on last October's enrolment rather than projections for next September. Instead of a surplus of six classrooms at the other schools, there will only be two, the trustee said.

Meanwhile, Mayor Courtney Haddock has announced he will ask for a meeting with the school board, Bruch and Education Minister Donald Brothers to search for a solution.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Love-Starved

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and my husband is 23. We've been married for a year and a half, and have a six-month-old son, which is the only reason I don't just pack up and leave.

My husband is worse than an old man. When he comes home from work, he kisses me, then goes in to look at the baby, then he buries his face in the newspaper until dinner. After dinner he can't get into bed fast enought — because that's where the television set is.

Our sex life, like — forget it. He says he had so much sex before marriage he doesn't even think about it any more. (That doesn't happen to be true in my case, but it doesn't bother him.)

When I want a little affection he makes me feel like a dirty old lady. I don't want to raise only one child, but if I ever get pregnant again it will be a miracle.

He is a hard-working man and a good person, really, but he is a lousy lover. Please tell me what to do. — Hungry for Love.

DEAR HUNGRY: Something is wrong with your husband. It's either physical, mental, or emotional. True, not all sexual appetites are the same, but your husband's is sadly below par. Keep nagging him until he gets help. If he is a "good person," he will realize that you are not a "flower — born to blush unseen, and waste your sweetness on the desert air."

DEAR ABBY: I am simply amazed at the response I continue to receive since my letter appeared in your column. It concerned the cruel tradition of denying brides the privilege of wearing white unless they were pure.

Of some 150 letters I received, only ten were negative. They suggested that I was encouraging promiscuity, which I did not, nor would I approve.

The pathetic tragedies of human suffering that have scarred the lives of so many persons needlessly is unbelievable.

When I offered you the use of my name, I had no idea you would include my church and its location. But I am now grateful to you for the gifts of kindness I have been able to receive because of it. I wish I were as good as some people perceive me to be.

My only regret was when I read my letter in your column, I saw that I had committed an error by referring to "black" as a symbol of evil or wrong. This is another cruel tradition carried on by our white racist culture unconsiously. One person wrote to me, critically because of it, and I sent her my apology. —Paul Whipple (Minister).

DEAR REVEREND WHIPPLE: You sound like a man I'd like to know.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago our son died. Friends and relatives kept us company up until the day of the funeral. Then we were left all alone.

I know they probably felt that the family wanted to be alone, which is so untrue, Abby. That was the time when we needed friends the most.

Many would call and ask us to come over. But we didn't really feel like going out. We aren't the type who would sit and cry and carry on in front of people. We needed our minds taken off our grief. Maybe we're different. Would you please ask your readers who lost someone close if they felt like we did. Or did they want to be left alone? — Alone in Anaheim.

DEAR ALONE: Offhand I'd say you are not different. Perhaps it will help to let people know that people do need people. We share our happiness with our friends. Why not our sorrow?

CONFIDENTIAL TO WILLIE MAE: Tell him that it's easy to become a father. It's harder to become a man.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Mathilda's Drain Worries Cease

By PENNY SAVER

"You can stop worrying about my drains now," said Mathilda to my husband recently. "I have drain insurance."

"Drain insurance?" he repeated incredulously.

Well, it it isn't called that," she replied, "but that is the way it seems to me. If I have any emergencies to do with drains, or roof leaks or anything of that sort at all, I have a number to call for quick, free, any-hour-of-the night service."

"Sounds great," he said with a grin. "But I do hope you checked to make sure the company has a good reputation."

Mathilda sniffed in indignation.

"At my age, I should be a good judge of character. Besides, the man practically begged me to call Better Business Bureau on the spot. He wouldn't do that unless he felt they would back him. The company isn't completely new, either. It has been going since early in 1968 in Vancouver, and since September here.

This service, she went on to explain, costs $34.50 a year. Three and five-year contracts are available, however, and depending on the terms of payment, the yearly cost can be as low as $24.50.

The first thing that the service provides when a person signs up for the service is a four-point preventive-care service (to be repeated annually, of course) that cleans the chimneys and eaves, reseals corners and joints of eaves, rotors all drain tiles, cleans the sump and checks the backwater valve if there is one.

This service could prevent emergencies in itself, and seems quite worth the yearly fee. But on top of this the plan provides 24-hour emergency service for minor roof leaks, leaks around the chimney, flooded basements and plugged plumbing at no extra charge.

"Of course, the emergency repair may still leave a more complex job to be done, and this would cost," said Mathilda. "The repair man, I am told, will notify you of this need, then you decide whether to get them to finish the job or call in someone else.

"But for an elderly person or someone who doesn't know about main shutoffs, it's the emergency service that counts.

"The company has men to do plumbing, roofing, eavestroughing, drains, painting, carpentry and so on, and feel that they can offer competitive prices to do such jobs. But, of course, you are free to shop if you think their estimate is high."

Ths company is willing to take any structure under their service, be it a private homr or a business.

Please call 382-3131 for information on how to contact this company.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

Shortcut to Sauerbraten Uses Canned Roast Beef

Sauerbraten can be a real production number or it can be no trouble at all.

Made by traditional methods, it requires a special marinade, hours or days of marinating, and long slow cooking to tenderness.

But it can be made with no marinade and no marinating, and about only a quarter hour's heating to achieve the proper flavor blend. How? By taking a shortcut right off the supermarket shelves: canned roast beef with gravy, and using it for the prime ingredient.

Sauerbraten is a hearty dish, so accompaniments can be on the light side: buttery hot peas, cabbage slaw and tender rye bread.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

2 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup chopped celery
½ cup dark raisins
2 tbsp. catsup
¾ cup crumbled gingersnaps (about 4)
½ cup water
¼ tsp. dry mustard
2 cans (12 oz. each) roast beef with gravy
Hot cooked noodles.

In hot butter or margarine, saute onion, celery and raisins 5 minutes. Add catsup. Blend gingersnaps with water and stir in; add dry mustard and cook, stirring, until thickened. Add roast beef, with gravy; cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 15 minutes. Serve over hot, cooked plain or poppyseed noodles. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Victoria Students Contest Runners-Up

Their teacher, Margaret Martin, learned of the contest results by telegram.

"They mailed us a list of the winners right after the results were announced," she said. "But if there is a strike we won't know for weeks who came first."

The class, Foods 12B, has won an appliance of their choice up to the value of $300, and a set of textbooks for the school foods lab.

The contest, sponsored by a group of national food manufacturers, required that they plan a week's menus for a family of four using certain brand foods, making sure all meals were nutritionally sound.

Ottawa Girl Learns East Indian Dances

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Her face and feet covered with red paint, pounds of silver jewelry draped over her silk dancing sari and her hair decked with a garland of jasmine — pretty Anne-Marie Groves of Ottawa resembles anyone but a young school teacher from Canada.

In fact, an Indian expert watching her go through her three-hour routine of intricate Hindu dances said: "No one who sees her on the stage would think she is anything but an Indian."

Anne-Marie, by her skilful handling of the intricate steps and gestures of Bharata Natyam and Odissi dancing, has won acclaim from Indian dance critics. One said: "Anne-Marie is one of the best Western exponents of Bharata Natyam we have seen."

Anne-Marie, 28, was teaching physical education and science in a Madras high school when she decided to learn Indian dancing in 1964.

Indian dancing, for the serious performer such as AnneMarie, is an epacting profession.

One performance can last for three hours—after six hours of daily practice. The graceful mudras and abinaya take months to learn and years to perfect.

Each gesture and movement carries a message as Anne-Marie, is an exacting fingers weave in harmony with carefully-rehearsed facial expressions.

Asked about her work, Anne-Marie said: "The hardest thing is to stand with your knees bent for a whole program—sometimes you get the feeling that stones are in your heels."

Too Much East At West Meet Criticized

By JIM NEAVES

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — While the One Prairie Province conference doesn't get under way until Sunday it already has been criticized for being loaded with easterners.

A. M. Harradence, a Calgary lawyer who heads the New West Task Force, says he's afraid they will bring eastern Canadian prejudice with them.

He said he will be at the conference which runs until Wednesday, but he's afraid political realignment of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba would weaken the voice of the West.

"If there were only one voting bloc with one or two weak voices, we'd be pretty easy for the others to deal with. . . . I wonder why the conference doesn't include more Western Canadians in its program?"

Mr. Harradence and his group thinks separation may be the only workable solution to Western problems, but regrets people think he is solely interested in separatism.

"Separatism is a last deperate measure, but if it seems to be the only viable solution to our problems then we'll have to fully consider it."

There is no hint of discussion of western separatism on the program, but the issue—fanned by increasing feelings of alienation in Western Canada—may be difficult to avoid.

Mr. Harradence said the West is fighting discriminatory tarriffs and freight rates, a discriminatory oil policy and eastern apathy toward the West.

"We're taking the same drubbing now that we've been taking practically since Confederation," he said.

"Separatist feelings are running pretty close to the surface here and one of our concerns is that we don't arouse or fan this emotion without a solid core of facts on which to base it."

Possibility of 5-Province Canada Kicked Around by Federal Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal cabinet ministers have discussed, though not as government policy, the consolidation of the 10 provinces into five, informed sources say.

The four Atlantic provinces would become one and the three Prairie provinces another single unit.

Veterans Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, New Brunswick representative in the cabinet, has personally endorsed the single-province Atlantic concept in a public speech.

Supply Minister James Richardson, from Manitoba, is expected to do the same for the Prairies in a speech at Lethbridge Sunday night.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, from Alberta, and Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand will also be in Lethbridge to attend a conference on the subject "One prairie province? A question for Canada."

The conference is being sponsored by the University of Lethbridge and the Lethbridge Herald and is expected to attract about 300 economists, businessmen, educationists, administrators and provincial and federal politicians.

It is understood that Mr. Richardson even has a name for the proposed one prairie province but he is saving that for his speech opening the Sunday-to-Wednesday meeting.

Though ministers here have discussed creation of single provinces in the Atlantic and prairie regions as a method of shifting some power from central Ontario and Quebec, there is no government policy as such on the matter, informants said.

This is considered an issue strictly for the provinces themselves.

Supporters of one prairie province would also like to ring in British Columbia but, for the moment, are confining their advocacy to Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba as a single political entity.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have for some time been looking at the possibility of political union and there is some thought that Newfoundland might be included in a single "Atlantis."

Backers of the idea of one prairie province see advantages other than legislative and administrative.

For instance, informants say, they see the possibility of a single prairie region taking responsibility for grain production and marketing instead of leaving this task in federal hands.

One source close to the cabinet said not a single cabinet minister is opposed to the idea of five provinces, though some are not wildly enthusiastic.

Prime Minister Trudeau is among the ministers who has discussed the idea informally.

Lang Accused Of Misleading

OTTAWA (CP) — Minutes after announcing a $20,000,000 wheat sale to Peru, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, was in trouble Thursday.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) charged in the Commons that Mr. Lang "told a deliberate lie" two hours before the announcement in telling the House he didn't plan to make a statement.

"No," Mr. Lang had replied, when asked by Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) whether he intended "to make a statement this afternoon."

Mr. Horner asserted that Mr. Lang had "deliberately misled" the House, then had gone upstairs to sign the sales agreement with the ambassador from Peru.

BARELY DENT

Champagne flowed and flashbulbs popped at the formal signing ceremony, although the 10,300,000-bushel sale will barely dent Canadian stockpiles of 1,000,000,000 bushels.

Mr. Horner's question of privilege was rejected after Mr. Lang explained that he thought Mr. Mazankowski was asking whether there would be a statement in the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said it appeared to be a misunderstanding on all sides.

However, he didn't force Mr. Horner to withdraw the word "lie." A few days ago, Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) withdrew a similar remark at the request of the Speaker.

Under the terms of the wheat sale, Peru will buy 7,400,000 bushels now and a further 2,900,000 during a 12-month delivery period up to June 30, 1971.

Irish Cabinet Reshuffled

DUBLIN (Reuters) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch announced today a cabinet reshuffle to fill the gaps created by his dismissal of two ministers for alleged gun-running.

The ousting of the ministers earlier this week caused one of Ireland's biggest political sensations since the troubles of the 1920s.

Finance Minister Charles Haughey and Agriculture Minister Neil Blaney were accused of trying to smuggle in arms for use in trouble-torn, British-controlled Northern Ireland.

The new finance minister is George Colley, former minister for industry and commerce. The ministry of agriculture went to James Gibbons, promoted from the ranks.

Other appointments:

Defence minister—Gerard Cronin, former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for postal services—Gerry Collins, also a former parliamentary secretary.

Minister for local government—Robert Molloy, a former parliamentary secretary.

Area Change For CN Manager

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Gordon D. MacMillan, Canadian National's area manager for Newfoundland since 1965, has been appointed manager of the railway's Assiniboine area, which includes parts of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario.

Mr. MacMillan, a native of Brandon, Man., begins his new job June 1.

His successor in Newfoundland has not been named.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Many Choices For Anglers This Weekend

By STEWART LANG

Almost any fishing spot on Vancouver Island, be it salt or fresh water, could be tried this weekend with good chances of success.

First, to salmon fishing . . .

In the southern portion of Saanich Inlet a large quantity of spring salmon seem to be feeding on herring.

May Hall reports that any depth or selection of lure seems to produce in the vicinities of Goldstream Island, Chesterfield Rock and Misery Bay.

Further north in the Inlet, bluebacks are ranging from three to three and a half pounds while springs have been caught up to 20 pounds.

Some limit catches of blues have been taken offshore at Whiskey Point using four to six ounces of weight and small spoons. Another spot that has produced blues, together with some jack springs, is in deep water off McKenzie Bay.

Main spring returns are coming from Indian and Coles Bays, to a lesser degree near the entrance to Tod Inlet, and very deep near Deep Hole and Stone House.

Blues and big springs supply the most action off Oak Bay around Trial, Chain and Chatham Islands for those fishing with 75 to 100 feet of line and from six to 16 ounces of weight.

Harry Southin boated a 26-pounder near one of these areas, but he didn't say exactly where.

Fishermen using strip and anchovies off the kelp bed near the Race area of Pedder Bay have been coming back with springs ranging from six to 20 pounds.

Other good catches have been reported from the Beechey Head section of Becher Bay.

Up-Islanders are catching springs and blues off the far side of Tent Island and in Sansum Narrows near Duncan and limits of blues near Five Fingers and Northwest Bay as well as south of Hornby Island.

Near Campbell River, springs are being landed in Duncan Bay but the main concentration of blues is still north in Seymour Narrows and Johnstone Strait.

And, for the trout angler . . .

Cowichan River has been rated as good near the White Bridge and up into its tributary — Holt Creek.

Various creek mouths in Cowichan Lake have also been yielding some bountiful harvests.

Near Nanaimo, all the lower lakes are producing and Bommerang Lake has figured prominantly among the local hotspots.

Both casting and fly-fishing have produced good results near the powerhouse on Great Central Lake and trout up to three pounds are not uncommon in Sproat Lake.

Fair returns are reported near Courtenay, with access only on weekends to Willimar, Wolf, Regan, Anderson and Blue Grouse lakes.

Trolling and fly-fishing seem to work equally well near Campbell River, with action hot in both Upper and Lower Campbell as well as Buttle Lakes.

Wes' Cycle Wheels Dodgers Past Mets

By The Associated Press

WES PARKER
. . . biggest thrill

Wes Parker realized a baseball ambition that has been nagging him for two years when he hit for the cycle Thursday night to spark Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-4 10-inning victory over the world champion New York Mets.

After smacking a double, homer and single earlier, the slick-fielding Los Angeles first baseman slammed a tie-breaking two-run triple in the 10th inning as the Dodgers erupted for three runs.

The setback left the second-place Mets with a 13-13 record —only 7-13 in games Tom Seaver hasn't started.

Elsewhere in the National League, red-hot Cincinnati Reds downed Chicago Cubs 5-2, Montreal Expos trounced San Francisco Giants 15-8, San Diego Padres trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 8-2 and Pittsburgh Pirates beat Houston Astros 9-5. Atlanta and St. Louis weren't scheduled.

Parker called his hitting display "about the biggest thrill I've ever had in baseball."

"I've thought about this ever since I just missed doing it against Cincinnati two years ago," Parker disclosed. "I had a single, double and triple and my last at-bat I missed a home run by a foot. The outfielder—I don't remember who it was—caught it leaping against the wall."

Ted Sizemore reached first on an error to open the 10th, Willie Davis beat out a bunt, Sizemore stole third and Von Joshua struck out before Parker walloped his triple far over the head of the Mets centre fielder Tommie Agee.

Wasn't Going to Stop for Anything

"I was just trying to hit the ball in the air for a sacrifice fly to get the lead run home," Parker said. "When I saw it go over Agee's head I wasn't going to stop for anything or anybody until I reached third base."

Parker tied the score 1-1 with a seventh-inning homer off starter Ray Sadecki, triggering a four-run uprising. After Billy Grabarkewitz doubled, Tug McGraw relieved but Jeff Torborg got a double when left fielder Cleon Jones failed to catch his long drive. The other runs came across on a single by Maury Wills and Willie Davis' double.

The Mets tied it with three in the eighth against relief pitcher Jim Brewer, unscored upon previously this season. Two runs scored when right fielder Joshua dropped a two-out fly ball with the bases loaded.

TIES STREAK RECORD

Agee's leadoff single in the first inning extended his hitting streak to 18 games, tying the club mark set by Frank Thomas in 1962, the Mets' first year.

The Reds increased their winning streak to eight games and sent the Cubs to their sixth straight defeat and first at home after 10 triumphs.

In the American League, they may be repeating to Moe Drabowsky: It's never over until the last man is out.

Drabowsky and his Kansas City Royals mates figured they had finally beaten Baltimore Orioles, but couldn't get the last out Thursday night.

Frank Robinson socked a two-out, three-run homer off reliever Drabowsky's first pitch to give the Orioles a dramatic 7-6 victory, their 17th straight over the Royals.

The last and only time the expansion Royals beat Baltimore was in the first meeting last year.

"Robinson's homer was disturbing, but I should've retired one of the other batters and not let that big guy get up there," said Drabowsky, who issued walks to pinch hitters Terry Crowley and Merv Rettemund before Robinson's shot.

"Robinson got his 2,300th hit off me last month," recalls Drabowsky, who helped the Orioles beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1966 World Series.

In other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers bounced Boston Red Sox 5-1 behind Denny Walton's hitting; Minnesota Twins shut off a late rally by Detroit to beat the Tigers 9-6; Roy White's two homers powered New York Yankees over Oakland Athletics 7-3 and California Angels crushed Washington Senators 8-0.

Rollins On Waivers

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Veteran infielder Rich Rollins has been placed on waivers by Milwaukee Brewers, who recalled pitcher Skip Lockwood from Portland of the Pacific Coast League.

Colwood Inn Win Protested By Gilmours

Colwood Inn rallied with a four-run outburst in the second inning Thursday evening to defeat Gilmour Construction 10-6 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League encounter at Heywood Avenue Park.

Gilmour lodged a protest in the top of the seventh inning over the hurling style of Jack Lundquist, who replaced first relief pitcher Al Graham in the top of the fifth. Graham relieved started George Barker in the top of the third.

Lundquist allegedly failed to keep both feet on the rubber.

Big Fivepin Game

FOUR FORMER QUEENS SEEKING TENPIN TITLE

Earlier this week a story on these pages said that no former women's tenpin champions had qualified this season for Sunday's seventh annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Somebody down here got his signals crossed because four former tenpin queens — Leona Peterson, Muriel Dodsworth, Peggy Parsons and Ollie Rutledge — earned rolloff berths by winning weekly awards in the 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Those four and 22 other winners of weekly awards are eligible to shoot for the women's tenpin crown at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Mayfair Lanes.

The men's tenpin rolloff will also be at Mayfair at the same time and men's and women's fivepin rolloffs will start one hour earlier at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Each of the four rolloff winners will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Daily Times will receive a bonus prize of $100.

There's No Middlesex But County Team Real

By STEVE HUME

Officially, it's the Middlesex County representative rugby side.

Politically speaking, on the other hand, it's an historical anachronism — chiefly because the county of Middlesex no longer exists.

Nevertheless, when the Middlesex reps are selected they are chosen from more than 200 rugby teams; only qualifications being that they play for clubs established within what used to be the ancient boundaries of Middlesex County.

Confusing?

Actually, what happened to Middlesex was that the City of London swallowed it up; but that's neither here nor there.

Middlesex may be a memory but the rugby players are real flesh and blood — as Victoria's Crimson Tide will discover when they clash with the touring team at Royal Athletic Park Monday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m.

And they should provide fans with a lively exhibition of rugby talent. The Middlesex County clubs have long been among the most powerful in the British Isles.

THREE INVITATIONALS

And the calibre of those clubs is reflected in the calibre of the individuals on tour. The touring side includes three Welsh internationals, two international trialists, and a British Universities player from Trinidad.

Leading the already impressive line-up is Wales' John Williams, generally conceded to be the finest fullback in rugby today. He has toured internationally with his country twice, has been capped by the Welsh 12 times, and also held the British Junior Tennis championship in 1966.

City Youngsters Top Fivepin List

A girls' team from Town and Country Lanes in Victoria learned Thursday that they had captured the Jets (under-nine) title in the Youth Bowling Congress provincial five-pin championships.

Results from games in 17 British Columbia centres were mailed to competition headquarters in Vancouver.

Town and Country's five-member team totaled 1,990 to down Old Orchard Lanes of Burnaby by 31 points.

Leach Paces Bomber Win

EDMONTON — Reg Leach scored three goals as Flin Flon Bombers took a 4-0 lead and hung on for a 4-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings Thursday in the third game of the best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League final.

Bombers, who lead the series 3-0, scored three goals in the first and Leach made it 4-0 early in the second. Edmonton scored once in the second period and twice in the final period.

Gun Club Stages Island Trap Meet

The scattergun season will open with a bang this weekend.

The Vancouver Island open trap championships, a Pacific International Trapshooting Association registered meet, is the first major bird-breaking event of the summer season at the Victoria Gun Club.

Shooting will get under way at 9 a.m. Saturday and wind up Sunday. A calcutta, to be shot Sunday, will be drawn Saturday evening at the Gun Club banquet in the Victoria Curling Club.

Events will include 16-yard singles, handicap singles and doubles. High overall gun, the major award, will be determined on results after shooting at 450 birds.

New Sidney Team To Play Saturday

Sidney Sweet Hearts, newest team in the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League will play a pair of exhibition games Saturday at Heywood Avenue Park.

They will meet Tillicums, another league team, at 3 p.m. and have also slated a game at 6 against Jubilettes, a group of student nurses, who will receive proceeds from the second game to help pay costs of recreational equipment.

SOCCER COMMISSION LEANS TO DEMOCRACY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Soccer Commission, governing body of all soccer in the province, will become an elected body Saturday, after almost 40 years as one appointed by the Canadian Soccer Football Association.

Retiring commission chairman Bill Stirling said Thursday the test of the change will be in the years to come.

"I don't know if an elected body can or will give any better governing than before," he said.

Three members will be elected for three-year terms, three for two years and another three for one year.

PORTLAND CAR TO RUN SUNDAY

Wheelstand Dragster

Richard Schroeder's wheelstanding 1969 AMX from Portland, Ore., will be the feature performer at the official opening of the drag-racing season at Van Isle Dragways on Sunday.

Major modifications, such as locating the engine in the rear and injecting nitro-methane fuel, enable the car to reach speeds in excess of 100 miles-per-hour while moving down the quarter-mile on its rear wheels.

In addition to the exhibition runs by Schroeder, regular competition will be held stock eliminator, late-model super-stock, modified and competition eliminator brackets.

Gates open at 11 a.m. Saturday for time trials and grudge racing. On Sunday gates will open at 9 a.m. and eliminations are slated for 1:30 p.m.

Saanich Mayor Calls Hydro Head 'Poorly Informed'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today a letter to the Victoria Daily Times from B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum is "saturated with inaccuracies."

He commented: "For the head of a provincial corporation to be so completely poorly informed as his letter reveals is clearly beyond belief."

Shrum, in a letter to the Times published Thursday, asked whether overhead power lines or sewage disposal has priority in Saanich, said he is "certain" Curtis would do something about sewer problems "if he had the money."

Shrum also said that "if" a sewage system is installed, ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay. He asked whether "construction of a sewage system that would stop the pollution of Gorge waters by septic tank seepage from Saanich" would have a higher priority than undergrounding a line across the Gorge.

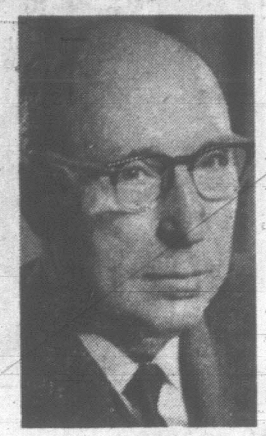
Curtis said the removal of raw sewage has been and remains Saanich's highest priority.

And this is being accomplished, he said, through a four-year program of extension of sewers to 3,400 acres (three-quarters the land size of Victoria city) and through trunk line and outfall work by the Capital Regional District.

The district, he pointed out, has already awarded the first contracts for work at the Macaulay Point outfall, located in Esquimalt and serving Esquimalt, parts of Victoria and much of the sewered and to-be-sewered areas of Saanich.

This rebuilt outfall will extend 6,100 feet into the sea instead of the present few feet, he said.



SHRUM
. . . 'if'

In addition, the Pollution Control Board of B.C. had granted a permit for the work and a special monitoring committee — including public health specialists and doctors and others — established to study water quality.

The PCB approval was on an experimental three-year basis to see if a treatment plant is necessary.

Curtis said there are no septic tanks in Saanich along the Gorge. The area has had sewers for 15 years, he said.

The reference to "seepage" was incorrect, although he acknowledged there is some flow down the Colquitz.

He pointed to last month's report, The Gorge Waterway, by Saanich design engineer Frank Neate.

In that report, Neate drew on pollution tests which suggested pollution in the Gorge was due to sanitary sewers emptying into the Inner Harbor in Victoria city (to be cleaned up under the approved city capital budget).

Neate said it is reasonable to conclude that organisms originating in Victoria Harbor travel into the inlet as far as Craigflower Bridge and highly likely they contribute to contamination in Portage Inlet.

CURTIS
. . . not if

The pollution tests showed water quality relatively high in Portage Inlet, decreasing from there to the harbor.

Curtis said not only has council identified and established sewerage as the top priority, but the public did so as well when it voted 80 per cent in favor of the sewerage enterprise referendum in 1968.

This enterprise covers the sewered and to-be-sewered areas in the current four-year plan. Work has already started in one area and sewers will connect with Macaulay regional lines when they are completed later this year.

"Our people have identified the problem and have committed their dollars," Curtis said.

To Shrum's reference that "if" a sewage system is to be installed ratepayers should have an opportunity to express their priority and willingness to pay, Curtis said simply: "They have already done so."

HIGH-WIRE PROTESTER SEEKS ISLAND SUPPORT

Pat Codyre, who is fighting to prevent the B.C. Hydro from taking over his and four other homes on Munn Road intends to enlist the whole of Vancouver Island in his battle.

At a meeting in St. Joseph's Church Hall Thursday he said he would form groups both here and up-Island in a bid to prevent installation of overhead transmission lines.

Several Duncan and Sidney residents were in the audience of 50.

Codyre pointed out that elected officials on municipal councils were helpless to control B.C. Hydro, which is not an elected body.

"This is a mockery of democracy."

In support, Ald. Alan Newberry said B.C. Hydro has more power than the provincial government.

"This is the only body in the entire province that doesn't have to come to municipal council for zoning approval on a project," he said.

Regional Police, Firemen Urged by City Alderman

By JIM HUME

A plea for the unification of all area police and fire-fighting forces was made this afternoon by Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson.

The alderman said he wants to see one police force and one fire-fighting force providing protection for at least the four core municipalities.

He asked council to endorse a move which would see Victoria spearhead discussions with Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to "seek his advice and assistance in bringing about the unification of all police and fire-fighting forces in this area as soon as possible, via the regional district, or in any other way possible."

NOT ENOUGH

Olafson, while expecting to win sympathetic council support for his move, could run into criticism from other municipalities.

In the past the municipalities surrounding Victoria have been against unified police and fire departments.

But Olafson says parochial rejection of the proposal is not enough to satisfy him.

"That is why I want to go to the minister to seek his guidance and assistance," he said this morning. "I feel the time has come when we must stop shying away from what is so obviously a regional problem."

ALREADY STARTED

Olafson said local governments had already occepted the fact that sewers, hospitals and public health services were matters of regional concern.

"Crime doesn't recognize municipal boundaries, neither does fire," he said. "It's beyond me why we haven't long ago come to grips with the matter."

During the interview Olafson said he is not advocating unification to save money nor with the object being staff reductions.

"We might save a little money, but that isn't what I'm looking for," he said. "What unification would do is give the taxpayers much better value than they now receive."

Olafson said his appeal to the minister for action is not to be construed as a criticism of any local police or fire-fighting force.

BETTER PROTECTION

"We get excellent police and fire protection," he said. "But I can't for the life of me see how we can justify four administrations, four sets of dispatchers, for different systems for each of the municipalities.

"Centrally-controlled fire and police departments obviously provide better protection for the public at large."

Olafson said he expected criticism for his move.

"Change from the old ways is never easy," he said.

At noon Olafson was still unsure of what support he would get from fellow council members, but he said he expected favorable reaction from most.

TRAINING SCHOOL

And he knows he has the support of Ald. Peter Pollen.

In budget talks ealier this week, Pollen left no doubt that he favored the regionalization of police and fire protective services.

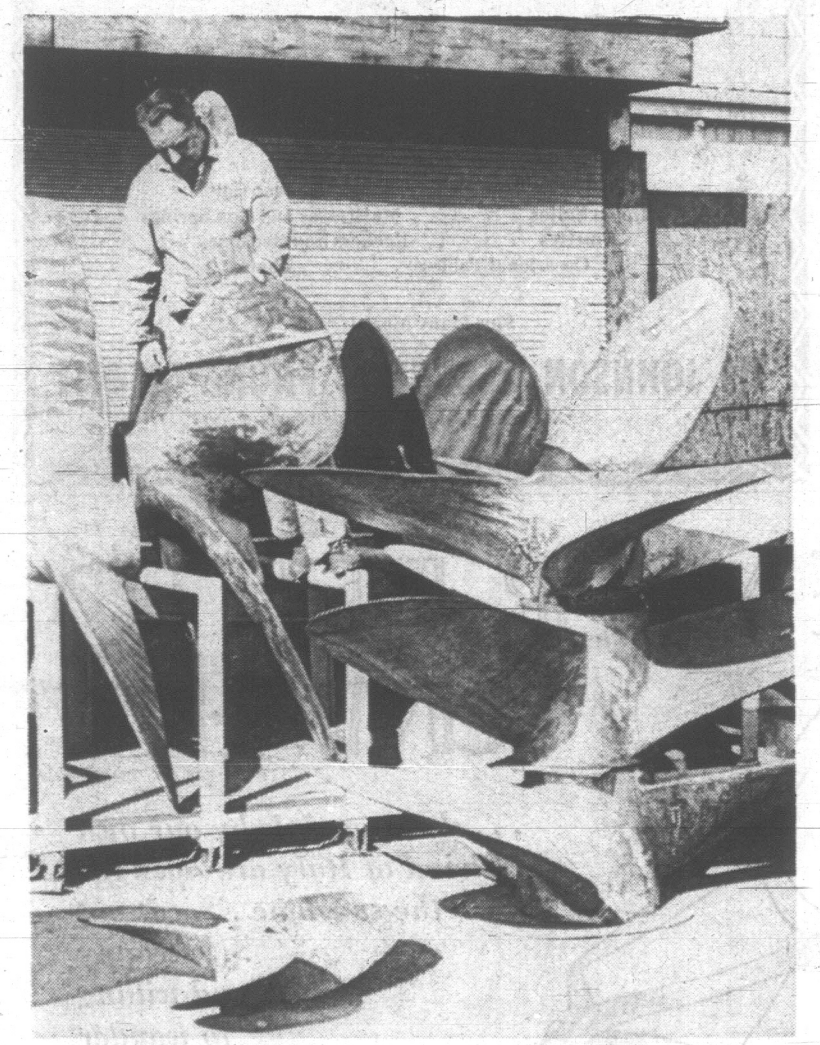
He made his stand known when he suggested that the Victoria fire training centre, approved in the capital budget vote, should be an area-wide training school.

In 1970 the Victoria police department budget has been estimated at $1,350,229.

The fire department is expected to spend $1,107,070.

In Saanich fire protection this year will cost $758,300 while police protection will cost the taxpayer $837,900 plus $15,385 in capital expenditures.

"There has to be a way to streamline these services," Olafson said. "And there has to be a way to hold cost in line while providing better value for the tax dollar."



The Prop Shop

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me when and where this year's Couchiching Conference will be held and what subject discussed?—W.B.

A. The Couchiching Conference will again be held at Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching, eight miles northwest of Orillia, Ontario, from July 15 to July 31. This year's subject is unknown.

200 Men Laid Off Here As Strike Closes Mill

Work stopped at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice sawmill this morning. The 200-man plant was being shut down this afternoon after "hot" logs reached the slipway from a boom branded by striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

Company manager Walter Nelson said there could be sufficient logs on hand for the 400-employee Victoria sawmill division, adjacent to the Point Ellice unit, to continue operating until Monday.

But he thought it likely the company would seek a court injunction Monday to restrain International Woodworkers of America members employed by BCFP from refusing to handle hot logs.

He said there appeared to be no further use in trying to get CMSG to lift the hot label from a two-week supply of logs stored in West Bay.

By tonight it was thought some 4,000 mill and woods workers would be out of jobs due to the CMSG strike preventing the normal flow of logs, booms, barges and scows used by the forest industry on the west coast.

'Gentle' Dog Castrated While on Daily Romp

A casual afternoon run for a purebred Irish setter turned into a horror story for a Central Saanich dog lover Thursday.

The four-year-old dog, owned by Trevor Hughes of 1934 Hovey Road, is in critical condition in an animal hospital today after being castrated by an unknown person.

Paddy, worth $125 as a pup, returned home after a two-hour absence exhausted, in deep shock and bleeding profusely.

"I have no idea who would do such a thing," Hughes said. "The dog was gentle and affectionate."

He said the castration had been done by someone who knew the technique used for operations on domestic farm animals.

"The operation was obviously done cleanly and efficiently, but it was done the wrong way for a dog. Paddy's life is just touch and go at this point — he's lost so much blood. Whoever did it just cut him and turned him loose still bleeding."

Central Saanich police are investigating the incident and Hughes has offered a $50 reward for information leading to the arrest of the individual or individuals involved.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has matched the reward with a further $50.

LIBRARIANS STUDY MEDIA

B.C. librarians will meet at the University of Victoria Saturday and Sunday for a workshop-conference entitled Exploring the Media.

The event is jointly sponsored by the Association of B.C. Librarians and the Institute of Victoria Librarians.

Keynote speaker Saturday will be former UBC librarian L. A. Leaf, currently civilian training specialist at Canadian Forces Fleet School, Esquimalt. His presentation is entitled The Media Specialist and the Librarian.

'CONTEMPTIBLE' SAYS JUDGE

2½ Years in Baseball Theft

A man who stole $1,138 from the National Little League here was sentenced today to two-and-a-half years in the penitentiary.

In handing down sentence, Judge William Ostler described the action of Charles Buchanan, 41, as contemptible.

"While you were pretending to support this youth organization you were commiting this wretched theft," said the judge.

Buchanan committed the theft while serving as treasurer for the baseball group between April 9 and Aug. 30, 1968.

Buchanan also pleaded guilty to stealing $396 from the Victoria Mobile Homes Towing Ltd., in 1969, and a pistol from the Bank of Nova Scotia main branch where he worked until 1968.

TRUSTEE TELLS BRUCH:

School Switch Won't Work

A member of the Greater Victoria school board has dismissed Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch's suggested solution to problems at Vic West elementary.

Bruch said some children could be sent to three Esquimalt schools as an alternative to using Vic West elementary's ailing 62-year-old main building.

Trustee Allan McKinnon says there will not be enough room at Lampson St., Macaulay and Rockheights in September for children from the six classrooms at Vic West.

McKinnon said Bruch based his suggestion on last October's enrolment rather than projections for next September. Instead of a surplus of six classrooms at the other schools, there will only be two, the trustee said.

Meanwhile, Mayor Courtney Haddock has announced he will ask for a meeting with the school board, Bruch and Education Minister Donald Brothers to search for a solution.

Arthur Mayse . . .

EXCEPT ON THE MORE remote claims, today's logger is a commuter. He may ride to his operation in a crummy, but it travels on tires instead of flanged steel. His natural transition is from footloose young high-stepper to householder and family man.

The roads that lace our Vancouver Island woods did more than end the logger's isolation. They changed his life pattern to an extent that the typical Tame Ape of the railway shows wouldn't have believed possible.

There were married loggers before the quiet revolution. As a gesture to these, the big outfits provided married quarters and the equivalent of the little red schoolhouse. But the claims were essentially preserves for the unwedded male. Camp was his home and his community, and to it he returned after each fling in town.

Sometimes in city winters, I would spot a remembered face in a Vancouver restaurant or beer parlor.

His stake was spent. He had a hangover. And he was homesick for the ordered, monastic life of the logger in the woods.

He would talk about camp as if it were paradise lost. The cookhouse food he had heartily damned three weeks before was pretty hard to beat. Look at these sad little hotcakes: what wouldn't he give for a stack of honest sweat-pads and a cup of good coffee.

Sure, logging was a hard life, and if a sapling didn't get him, the haulback line would. But that life had its points . . . He'd go on in that vein until I was a little homesick too.

The place he yearned for was a scatteration of weathered frame structures mounted on log sleds and strung out along a railway siding.

There were the long, low bunkhouses ranged in rows. Fronting them were wooden catwalks chewed and pitted by boot calks. There was the saw filer's many-windowed shack down by the tracks, the cookhouse-dining hall, and the meat house raised well off the ground.

Next to the timekeeper's office was the camp commissary, universally called by another name unflattering to management. In the commissary, the logger could replenish his needs. Tickets charged against his time bought new rigging gloves, socks, toothpaste, soap, fine-cut tobacco or maybe dark and pungent snoose in a little round can.

This was painful spending. It meant that much less to take down next trip. Skyline Blondy, spendthrift in town, was determinedly thrifty in the woods.

Add a first-aid shack, toss in a water-tank where the chunky logging locomotives paused to drink. And there, more or less, was the woods camp of a railway show flung down in a few acres of logging burn.

It had no real permanence. When it had served its function in one area, its buildings would travel by rail to make a little town elsewhere.

Its population was by no means permanent, either. A main tenet of logger philosophy was that a man should be free to go or stay as he chose.

So each steamer day, there was a coming and going — a man or two heading for the beach, and others arriving to make a stake.

The camp bedmaker, a logger himself before the years caught up with him, would assign the newcomer to a bunkhouse. His bed was a steel-framed cot with grey woollen blankets and clean white sheets. But with suitcase under the bed, packsack hung on a spike and small gear in a butter box nailed to the wall, he was back where Skyline Blondy yearned to be.

At home, that is, and ready to go to work. Give him a day, and he would be grumbling cheerfully about the lunchmaker's stinginess and the stupidities of the side-push.

He was back in the woods, and it would be months before the city, with his enthusiastic co-operation, got a chance to pluck him again.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Love-Starved

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and my husband is 23. We've been married for a year and a half, and have a six-month-old son, which is the only reason I don't just pack up and leave.

My husband is worse than an old man. When he comes home from work, he kisses me, then goes in to look at the baby, then he buries his face in the newspaper until dinner. After dinner he can't get into bed fast enought — because that's where the television set is.

Our sex life, like — forget it. He says he had so much sex before marriage he doesn't even think about it any more. (That doesn't happen to be true in my case, but it doesn't bother him.)

When I want a little affection he makes me feel like a dirty old lady. I don't want to raise only one child, but if I ever get pregnant again it will be a miracle.

He is a hard-working man and a good person, really, but he is a lousy lover. Please tell me what to do. — Hungry for Love.

DEAR HUNGRY: Something is wrong with your husband. It's either physical, mental, or emotional. True, not all sexual appetites are the same, but your husband's is sadly below par. Keep nagging him until he gets help. If he is a "good person," he will realize that you are not a "flower — born to blush unseen, and waste your sweetness on the desert air."

DEAR ABBY: I am simply amazed at the response I continue to receive since my letter appeared in your column. It concerned the cruel tradition of denying brides the privilege of wearing white unless they were pure.

Of some 150 letters I received, only ten were negative. They suggested that I was encouraging promiscuity, which I did not, nor would I approve.

The pathetic tragedies of human suffering that have scarred the lives of so many persons needlessly is unbelievable.

When I offered you the use of my name, I had no idea you would include my church and its location. But I am now grateful to you for the gifts of kindness I have been able to receive because of it. I wish I were as good as some people perceive me to be.

My only regret was when I read my letter in your column, I saw that I had committed an error by referring to "black" as a symbol of evil or wrong. This is another cruel tradition carried on by our white racist culture unconsiously. One person wrote to me, critically because of it, and I sent her my apology. —Paul Whipple (Minister).

DEAR REVEREND WHIPPLE: You sound like a man I'd like to know.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago our son died. Friends and relatives kept us company up until the day of the funeral. Then we were left all alone.

I know they probably felt that the family wanted to be alone, which is so untrue, Abby. That was the time when we needed friends the most.

Many would call and ask us to come over. But we didn't really feel like going out. We aren't the type who would sit and cry and carry on in front of people. We needed our minds taken off our grief. Maybe we're different. Would you please ask your readers who lost someone close if they felt like we did. Or did they want to be left alone? — Alone in Anaheim.

DEAR ALONE: Offhand I'd say you are not different. Perhaps it will help to let people know that people do need people. We share our happiness with our friends. Why not our sorrow?

CONFIDENTIAL TO WILLIE MAE: Tell him that it's easy to become a father. It's harder to become a man.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Mathilda's Drain Worries Cease

By PENNY SAVER

"You can stop worrying about my drains now," said Mathilda to my husband recently. "I have drain insurance."

"Drain insurance?" he repeated incredulously.

Well, it it isn't called that," she replied, "but that is the way it seems to me. If I have any emergencies to do with drains, or roof leaks or anything of that sort at all, I have a number to call for quick, free, any-hour-of-the night service."

"Sounds great," he said with a grin. "But I do hope you checked to make sure the company has a good reputation."

Mathilda sniffed in indignation.

"At my age, I should be a good judge of character. Besides, the man practically begged me to call Better Business Bureau on the spot. He wouldn't do that unless he felt they would back him. The company isn't completely new, either. It has been going since early in 1968 in Vancouver, and since September here.

This service, she went on to explain, costs $34.50 a year. Three and five-year contracts are available, however, and depending on the terms of payment, the yearly cost can be as low as $24.50.

The first thing that the service provides when a person signs up for the service is a four-point preventive-care service (to be repeated annually, of course) that cleans the chimneys and eaves, reseals corners and joints of eaves, rotors all drain tiles, cleans the sump and checks the backwater valve if there is one.

This service could prevent emergencies in itself, and seems quite worth the yearly fee. But on top of this the plan provides 24-hour emergency service for minor roof leaks, leaks around the chimney, flooded basements and plugged plumbing at no extra charge.

"Of course, the emergency repair may still leave a more complex job to be done, and this would cost," said Mathilda. "The repair man, I am told, will notify you of this need, then you decide whether to get them to finish the job or call in someone else.

"But for an elderly person or someone who doesn't know about main shutoffs, it's the emergency service that counts.

"The company has men to do plumbing, roofing, eavestroughing, drains, painting, carpentry and so on, and feel that they can offer competitive prices to do such jobs. But, of course, you are free to shop if you think their estimate is high."

Ths company is willing to take any structure under their service, be it a private homr or a business.

Please call 382-3131 for information on how to contact this company.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

Shortcut to Sauerbraten Uses Canned Roast Beef

Sauerbraten can be a real production number or it can be no trouble at all.

Made by traditional methods, it requires a special marinade, hours or days of marinating, and long slow cooking to tenderness.

But it can be made with no marinade and no marinating, and about only a quarter hour's heating to achieve the proper flavor blend. How? By taking a shortcut right off the supermarket shelves: canned roast beef with gravy, and using it for the prime ingredient.

Sauerbraten is a hearty dish, so accompaniments can be on the light side: buttery hot peas, cabbage slaw and tender rye bread.

SPEEDY SAUERBRATEN

2 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup chopped celery
½ cup dark raisins
2 tbsp. catsup
¼ cup crumbled gingersnaps (about 4)
½ cup water
¼ tsp. dry mustard
2 cans (12 oz. each) roast beef with gravy
Hot cooked noodles.

In hot butter or margarine, saute onion, celery and raisins 5 minutes. Add catsup. Blend gingersnaps with water and stir in; add dry mustard and cook, stirring, until thickened. Add roast beef with gravy; cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 15 minutes. Serve over hot, cooked plain or poppyseed noodles. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Victoria Students Contest Runners-Up

Their teacher, Margaret Martin, learned of the contest results by telegram.

"They mailed us a list of the winners right after the results were announced," she said. "But if there is a strike we won't know for weeks who came first."

The class, Foods 12B, has won an appliance of their choice up to the value of $300, and a set of textbooks for the school foods lab.

The contest, sponsored by a group of national food manufacturers, required that they plan a week's menus for a family of four using certain brand foods, making sure all meals were nutritionally sound.

Ottawa Girl Learns East Indian Dances

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Her face and feet covered with red paint, pounds of silver jewelry draped over her silk dancing sari and her hair decked with a garland of jasmine — pretty Anne-Marie Groves of Ottawa resembles anyone but a young school teacher from Canada.

In fact, an Indian expert watching her go through her three-hour routine of intricate Hindu dances said: "No one who sees her on the stage would think she is anything but an Indian."

Anne-Marie, by her skilful handling of the intricate steps and gestures of Bharata Natyam and Odissi dancing, has won acclaim from Indian dance critics. One said: "Anne-Marie is one of the best Western exponents of Bharata Natyam we have seen."

Anne-Marie, 28, was teaching physical education and science in a Madras high school when she decided to learn Indian dancing in 1964.

Indian dancing, for the serious performer such as AnneMarie, is an epacting profession.

One performance can last for three hours—after six hours of daily practice. The graceful mudras and abinaya take months to learn and years to perfect.

Each gesture and movement carries a message as Anne-Marie, is an exacting fingers weave in harmony with carefully-rehearsed facial expressions.

Asked about her work, Anne-Marie said: "The hardest thing is to stand with your knees bent for a whole program—sometimes you get the feeling that stones are in your heels."

6.5% Mortgage Planned in U.S.

By ROBERT J. SAMUELS

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. House subcommittee Thursday approved a 4 billion dollar plan to establish a National Development Bank to supply home mortgages for middle-income families at interest rates not exceeding 6.5 per cent.

OPPOSITION EXPECTED

The administration is expected to oppose the plan. Thursday the voting in the House banking and currency subcommittee followed party lines, with eight Democrats supporting the measure and six Republicans opposing it.

a The bill is scheduled to come before the full committee next Tuesday.

Under the proposal, the President would have the option of using general revenues or tapping private pension funds and commercial banks to fund the new bank.

Pension funds and foundations could be required to divert up to 2.5 per cent of their assets into market securities whose proceeds would be re-lent by the new bank. To use commercial bank funds, the President would have to win the co-operation of the federal reserve system, which could authorize banks to transfer some of their cash reserves — now on deposit at the FED, where they earn no interest — to the new bank.

IN TROUBLE

According to its democratic sponsors, the new plan is intended to provide assistance for middle-income families too wealthy to qualify for existing federal housing subsidies. These middle-income families, the Democrats say, are experiencing difficulty not only in finding mortgage money but also in paying today's high interest rates — 8.51 per cent in March on conventional loans.

For the administration, however, the Democratic proposal represents another obstacle blocking quick enactment of its own package to provide more mortgage money for housing.

The main administration proposal involves supplying 250 million dollars to subsidize loans to the nation's savings and loan associations, the single largest source of funds for homebuilding.

These new below-market interest loans would be aimed at preventing S & LS from making huge net repayments of their 10 billion dollars in outstanding loans from the 12 regional federal home loan banks. If the S & LS quickly repay these funds, the money available for new mortgages would decline correspondingly.

But the administration's proposal, which passed the Senate 72-0, is now contained in the same legislation with the National Development Bank.

Cowichan Can't Quit Malaspina

Thursday the Cowichan school board said it was pulling out of Malaspina regional college. Today the college said it can't.

"Under the recently passed amendments to the Public Schools Act a school board must have the unanimous approval of the other participating school districts as well as the consent of the council of public instruction (the cabinet) and the minister of education before that district can withdraw from participation," W. R. MacMillan, chairman of the Malaspina College Council, said in a statement today.

TOO HIGH

Cowichan school board chairman David Haywood, in announcing the withdrawl Thursday, said his board feels Cowichan is paying too high a share of operating costs.

He said the school board had been seeking changes in financing of the college for the past four months. It wants the number of students from the district taken into account.

MacMillan said today the agreement under which the year-old college functions includes a uniform tax levy for each of the participating school districts.

Haywood had pointed out that last year the Cowichan district paid 28.24 per cent of the college's operating costs but Cowichan district students represented less than 10 per cent of the college enrolment.

Macmillan today expressed concern about the effect of the Cowichan announcement on students from the Duncan area.

"Students already enrolled or graduating senior secondary students from the Cowichan area should be assured that Malaspina will continue to accept them at the lower registration fees that participating school districts enjoy."

Subway For Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)— The Brazilian government gave the go-ahead Thursday to construction of Rio's first subway system, to be built with the help of foreign money. A second subway also is planned for Sao Paulo, 220 miles southwest of the capital. Each subway is planned to extend 41 miles.

Victoria Hospitals Have 1.8 Staff Ratio

Cutting 50 from the staff at Royal Columbian Hospital at New Westminster will bring it closely in line with staff ratios at Victoria's two major hospitals.

Figures which contrast the size of staff to number of beds in three hospitals show there are slightly over two staff members per bed at Royal Columbian and about 1.8 staff per bed at both St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee Hospitals.

The staff cut of 50 being undertaken at Royal Columbian will drop its ratio to about 1.8 as well.

The figures:

At Royal Columbian: a staff of 931 for 445 beds, producing a ration of 2.1 staff per bed.

At St. Joseph's: a staff of 783 for 428 beds producing a ration of about 1.8 staff per bed.

At Royal Jubilee: an adjusted staff figure of 1,130 (which takes into account 1,075 full-time employees and 168 people who work part-time regularly) for 610 beds (including those in use at the Eric Martin Institute) for a ration of about 1.8 staff per bed.

Jaycee 'Dogs Thrown Out

The Juicy Jaycee Hotdog, with mustard and relish, has again been banished from the grounds of Memorial Arena.

The saga of the hotdog started two years ago when Victoria city council established policy which saw city staff operate concessions at city-owned recreation centres.

That policy was adhered to firmly until Monday afternoon when former alderman Michael J. Griffin persuaded the city's recreation and community services committee that the Juicy Jaycee Hotdog was different from other hotdogs.

The committte reversed standard policy and gave permission to the Jaycees to operate a booth adjacent to Memorial Arena during the Jaycee Fair next week.

Jaycee joy was short-lived.

This was budget week and city council was in cutting frame of mind. Reminded by Ald. Hugh Ramsay that recreation facilities lost $93,000 a year and that the deficit would go higher if concession revenues were lost, council Thursday overruled its committee.

Said Ald. Percy Frampton, a former Jaycee: "We did a telephone survey and eight members of council said they were against letting the Jaycee organization break the rules."

There are nine members of council.

Crozier Raps Interference

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Roger Crozier, star goalie for Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, says television makes him tired.

In a dinner speech, Crozier criticized the NHL for permitting the Columbia Broadcasting System to dictate weekend scheduling.

"When a team plays on a Saturday night out of town and has to be ready for a home game Sunday afternoon, it is hard on the players," he said. "Players do not get to bed until 4 a.m. following a tiring trip and to be ready for a game at one in the afternoon is a bit much."

Such scheduling, he said, did not exist before CBS began carrying a "game of the week," on Sundays.

EITHER RACE GOES ON OR NEW MENU

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The 9th annual world's largest turtle race with a record 75 entries has been postponed because of the closure of California colleges which participate in the event.

An official at California State College at Los Angeles where the race was to be held, said it would be rescheduled next week or "we'll have an awful lot of turtle soup in the cafeteria."

More Juveniles Face Jail

By PETER McNELLY

The provincial attorney-general's department Thursday told the Family and Children's Service it will raise more juvenile cases to adult court because of the lack of juvenile delinquent care facilities here.

The result will be that more sentences for juvenile offences will be served in adult jails and prisons.

The Family and Children's Service was advised of the policy change in a letter from the attorney-general's office.

The attorney-general's department has the authority to raise juvenile cases to adult court under the federal Juvenile Delinquent Act.

Under current provincial legislation, young people aged 12 to 19 found guilty in juvenile court here are sentenced into the care of the Family and Children's Service, placed on probation or fined.

In 1968, amendments to the provincial Protection of Children Act gave responsibility for developing juvenile delinquent treatment facilities to children's aid societies where they exist. In Victoria, this is the F and CS. There are two other children's aid societies in Vancouver.

Social Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi said this morning the province has adequate juvenile delinquent treatment facilities and is developing more.

"We have a cabinet committee working on this problem all the time," he said. "I don't understand what the attorney-general's department is talking about."

Gaglardi said there is no place in the world which has facilities to handle certain kinds of young offenders. He said the attorney-general's department may have made the decision in an attempt to provide facilities for what he called "certain types of erring individuals."

He did not elaborate on the meaning of his term. Gaglardi said his department is continuing plans for construction of a young offenders unit in Sooke to complement existing treatment programs.

When told of the attorney-general's department intention to refer more juvenile cases to adult court, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said, "this is an unbelievable admission of their own inadequacy."

Barrett, who is also a social worker, said the provincial government first avoided direct responsibility for the care of juveniles when it passed the 1968 amendments permitting the private agencies to develop programs to supervise and rehabilitate young offenders.

WRIGHT
. . . condemns move

F and CS Executive Director Gordon Wright condemned the attorney-general's department decision as "a thoroughly destructive undertaking."

Wright said moving more juvenile cases to adult court will only result in more juveniles going to jail. "That any adolescent at any point should have to be imprisoned suggests a failure of society's resources," he said.

He said it does no good to take juvenile delinquents outside the community and put them in what he termed prison's "fake society."

The F and CS is planning to enlarge its treatment facilities by setting up special group homes for delinquents in Greater Victoria. The first will open in the next six months and three more will be established during the next 18 months.

A spokesman in the attorney-general's department this morning said lack of juvenile treatment facilities is a problem not only in Victoria but throughout the province.

He said the department's decision is not a criticism of children's aid societies in Victoria and Vancouver. The decision to refer more juvenile cases to adult court will be applied throughout British Columbia, the spokesman said.

The 1968 amendments to the Protection of Children Act, he said, anticipated development of treatment facilities. These facilities have developed slowly, necessitating the department's decision, he said.

Wright said the intention of the amendments was to provide an alternative to jailing, even though they allow children's aid societies to send a juvenile to jail if necessary.

Wright agrees this sometimes has to happen, but he said he does not think private agencies such as the F and CS should have this power.

"The power to send a person to prison should not be in the hands of a private agency but

'HAWKS' INVADE N.Y. CITY HALL

NEW YORK (AP)—More than 1,000 young men, many of them construction workers expressing opposition to Mayor John V. Lindsay's anti-war sentiments, stormed city hall today, clashing with police and student peace demonstrators.

The workers, six of them carrying American flags, swarmed into City Hall Park chanting, "Raise that flag."

Lindsay, who had ordered city flags at half staff in memory of the four slain Kent State University, Ohio, students, was downtown attending an anti-war rally.

TAKING THEIR COMPLAINTS to the government, more than 80 parents and students from Qualicum school district quietly register protest over lack of funds that led to a school board decision to cut out side-road busing. No member of the board was present, and Education Minister Donald Brothers was out of town. (Halkett photo.)

Work-to-Rule At Hospital

The British Columbia Hospital Employees Union Thursday night began a work-to-rule campaign at Royal Columbian Hospital to protest staff layoffs.

The hospital board decided to cut staff by 50 because of austerity measures instituted by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark. Vice-chairman Dr. R. D. MacNeill, quit in protest.

Meanwhile, hospital director R. B. Thomson Thursday posted a notice to staff saying the quality and quantity of care at the hospital will suffer because of the cuts.

His notice formally advised staff there will be layoffs but gave no details. Medical director R. G. Foulkes, however, said the 50 will include 26 nurses and eight other medical employees.

The union, with 550 members at RCH before staff cuts were announced, said it will post information pickets around the hospital next week. The union has 8,000 members in the province.

RCH board chairman Jack Biggs said the staff laid off will not qualify for unemployment insurance benefits because the provincial government has never agreed to pay a share of contributions.

"In the light of what has happened at RCH," he said, "I think it would be fair of the government to change this policy."

A press release Thursday night outlined service cuts.

—Visting hours, presently from 2-8 p.m., will be 7-8 p.m., except for close relatives.

—Non-essential operations, such as plastic surgery, will not be performed on weekends.

—Electro-shock treatment for psychiatric patients will be ended and patients referred to Hollywood or Riverview hospitals.

—The number of doctors on staff, about 200, may be reduced in the fall when additions to Surrey Memorial Hospital are completed.

—Out-patient fees, cost of private and semi-private rooms and meal prices in the staff cafeteria will all increase.

Middle-Age Vigilantes Hit, Spray Students

SEATTLE (AP) — Groups of middle-aged vigilantes swinging clubs indiscriminantly against students and spraying youths with a chemical substance reportedly roamed the University of Washington campus Thursday night while police and anti-war demonstrators fought on its fringes.

A person identifying himself as Michael Templeton, a UW graduate student in physics, said he "got three or four licks" with that he called "nightsticks or billy clubs" and said they were wielded by a group of 10-15 men. Templeton didn't describe the extent of his injuries.

A Seattle Post-Intelligencer news team said it saw one band of about 12 men in civilian clothes and armed with clubs.

Capital Awaits Rally; Million Students Strike

By HAYNES JOHNSON
The Washington Post

An air of crisis, growing out of events in Cambodia and on American campuses, confronted the U.S. today as the country braced for massive protest demonstrations.

The dimensions of the trouble were reflected in a number of extraordinary events:

● Hundreds of colleges and universities, affecting about a million students, were closed in the first general student strike in the nation's history;

● Hundreds of thousands of citizens began gathering for demonstrations scheduled across the U.S. from the nation's capital to California. In Washington, officials were preparing for more than 100,000 demonstrators and troops were alerted;

● In College Park, Md., the scene of recent turmoil, 900 faculty members and 5,000 students were occupying Cole Field House Thursday night, defying an order to close the university;

● National guardsmen were alerted to stand by in all states to watch over armories and thwart possible acts of arson or violence. Guard units remained in position on five campuses.

● President Nixon summoned the governors of all 50 states to meet him Monday in the White House. They will discuss "the disruption of peace, violence and potential violence throughout the nation," it was announced.

● A Republican governor's conference was cancelled because of conditions. The 13 governors who had come to Santa Fe, New Mexico, were being protected by the state guard before the conference was cancelled.

Many attempted to explain the present unrest. New York's Mayor John Lindsay spoke of the United States being on the verge of a "physical breakdown."

A cabinet officer, Health Secretary Robert Finch, attributed what he called a "national crisis" to the American intervention in Cambodia. That, he said, was the "straw that broke the camel's back."

The immediate causes were President Nixon's announcement of one week ago that the U.S. was sending troops into Cambodia, triggering fears of a wider Asian war, and the slaying of four Kent State students in a clash with national guardsmen Monday.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM CHALLENGED

Mailmen Test Ottawa Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President C. M. Drury left little doubt Thursday that the federal government is banking its anti-inflation program on a final test of wills with 27,000 postal workers.

The two sides in the contract dispute are well apart from the compromise wage settlement proposed by Judge Rene Lippe of Montreal in a conciliation board report which split three ways on the issue.

The report was made public Thursday. At a news conference, Mr. Drury said the government felt its wage offer "has been adequate."

The government offer would increase wages for postal workers by 16.1 per cent in a 30-month period ending April 1, 1972.

Postmen's Demands — See Background Story Page 43

The demand of the Council of Postal Unions is for a two-year contract, expiring Sept. 30, 1971, which would raise wages by 23.3 per cent. The last postal contract expired Oct. 1, 1969.

Judge Lippe's proposal would have increased the base rate in the post office over the 30-month period by 19.4 per cent to $3.07 from $2.57 an hour. The top rate among those in dispute is now $3.23 an hour.

OTTAWA NEXT FOR CLAIM SAY NISHGAS

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A British Columbia Indian tribe's claim to 4,800 square miles of land in the northern section of the province will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada, the tribe said today.

The Nishga tribe's claim was rejected Thursday for a second time when the B.C. Appeal Court upheld an earlier ruling by the B.C. Supreme Court.

"The case definitely will be going to the Supreme Court of Canada," the president of the Nishga Tribal Council, Frank Calder, said today. Calder is NDP member for Atlin in the B.C. legislature.

under the protection of the law."

Barrett said he agrees with Wright, that the power to send people to jail should remain with the courts.

This spring, in the legislature, Barrett introduced amendments to the Protection of Children Act which would have required yearly reviews of juveniles sentenced into the care of children's aid societies.

The amendments were defeated.

The attorney-general's department spokesmann said Victoria needs a small detention centre for juveniles.

But the F and CS is making plans for special group homes specifically designed to handle juvenile delinquents.

F and CS directors this week approved the hiring of a supervisor to direct the program. Wright said that when the four homes are open they will be able to handle a total of 32 young offenders.

Wright said there are several reasons behind the new program:

The F and CS assumed entire responsibility in February for developing juvenile treatment facilities for the Victoria area.

There is no longer available space at Brannan Lake and Willingdon for juveniles who cannot be placed with their families, in foster homes, Sevenoaks or existing group homes.

Existing F and CS programs need expansion.

The alternative is to construct a local jail for juveniles.

Under current programs the F and CS has not emphasized detention of juveniles. Wright said a study of 45 juveniles handled by his organization last year showed 10 were placed in group homes, 19 were discharged or sent back to their families, 12 were sent to training schools (now called 'child care resource centres') and four were sent to correctional institutes.

Asked if the shift of more juvenile cases into adult court will affect F and CS plans, Wright said: "We have been absorbing and planning for a greater number of adolescents. This will have no effect on what we're doing."

Wright said there is nothing the F and CS can do about the attorney-general's department decision.

"I think we can do something, but whether this community will let us do it is another question."

He said he is disturbed by the lack of co-ordination in juvenile delinquent programs between the attorney-general's department and the social welfare department.

"This decision will harm juveniles in the province for a long time to come," Wright said.

. . . MAILMEN TEST

with the report, the unions council announced it will ask union members to authorize strike action in a vote set for May 19.

The council stated it is willing to resume negotiations with the treasury board but warned that postal workers will not accept an agreement that does not include a "good increase" and provisions for job security.

It added that the minority ompinion filed by labor consultant William Walsh of Hamilton, Ont., could well become "the strike manifesto of the postal workers."

Copies of the conciliation report are being printed in both French and English and will be distributed to all union members within the next week.

The government position set out in the report by Keith Campbell, a vice-pre-president of Canadian Pacific Railway, is that the present economic climate demands "the utmost restraint in the amount of the wage increase that should be either sought by the employees or granted by the employer."

CALLS IT 'UNREALISTIC'

In sharp contrast, Mr. Walsh said "it would be unrealistic to expect the 27,000 postal employees . . . to accept less favorable wage adjustments than are generally being achieved."

Mr. Drury said the government's offer is in line with settlements negotiated with other elements of the public service—most of which have waived the right to strike.

The government is seeking a relatively long-term contract to enable the post office to introduce needed changes, he said. It would not offer a quick settlement that would bring the parties back to the bargaining table within a year to consider the effects of anti-inflation efforts.

At the same time, the government was not prepared to pay an inflated price for the tail-end of a 30-month or three-year agreement. The unions would have to trust that government policies will effectively control the cost of living.

tered the South Vietnamese troops instead.

The Viet Cong opened fire from all sides with rocket grenades and machine-guns. Within a few minutes, South Vietnamese dead and wounded littered the fields.

Some civilian casualties also were reported, but no count was available.

To the northeast, U.S. troops probed for the fourth day through a bunker system described by the White House Thursday as "a major sophisticated base complex" that might be the headquarters of the supreme Communist command.

But field officers said they had no evidence that the headquarters itself had been found and the equipment in the bunkers was not particularly sophisticated.

The base is in the Fishhook region of Cambodia. It was two miles wide and a mile long, and contained about 50 earthen bunkers filled with hundreds of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food. The searchers also found the ruins of a classroom-type building with a capacity for 150 persons.

EIGHT KILLED

Other U.S. troops operating farther to the northeast in Cambodia ran into heavy North Vietnamese fire, and eight Americans were killed, the U.S. command said. It was the most American deaths reported in a single action in Cambodian operations.

Headquarters said 24 North Vietnamese troops were killed in the fight.

Tug Owners 'Vindicated' By Remarks

B.C. Towboat Owners Association today said it has been vindicated by remarks of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey in its stand against striking employees, members of Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

The guild, in its sixth day of a strike that idled most of some 400 towboats operated by association members, earlier found support for its action from the labor minister.

The association said the owners position was completely vindicated by remarks in Ottawa by Mackasey Thursday, including:

"Because it was a unanimous conciliation board report, I frankly would have expected labor to find other ways of settling this dispute rather than going on strike. The government will not attempt to have safety regulations written into the contract. Management has been very fair in this dispute," the minister was quoted.

REFERENCE TO WAGES

The reference was to recommendations for a wage increase, but the guild also wants safety, manning and accommodation provision written into the contract, which were recommended in a separate government report.

The BCTOA said the minister had made his position clear, and was saying in effect what the association had said from the outset, "that there is absolutely no justification for the present strike by the guild, that the association cannot legislate safety in this industry, that this responsibility lies with the department of transport."

Nerve Gas Precautions 'Adequate'

A senior planner with the Emergency Measures Organization in Ottawa said today government officials are "very satisfied" with precautions Americans are taking on a planned shipment of deadly nerve gas from Okinawa through Juan de Fuca Strait to a storage depot in Oregon.

R. L. Rutherford added that after the shipment reaches Bangor, Wash., "it poses no danger to Canadians."

B. J. Perry from the defence research board said the only possible danger to Canada would occur if there was an explosion aboard ship and material thrown into the air. This would require an explosion in excess of 500 tons of TNT.

MP REBUKED FOR STRIP ACT

LONDON (UPI) — When member of Parliament Jock Bruce Gardyne removed his jacket in a Commons committee hearing to get relief from the 70-degree heat, he was reprimanded by chairman Sir Robert Grant-Ferris.

"I consider that the duty of the chair is to see proceedings of Parliament are carried on in a decorous way and are seen to be decorous," Grant-Ferris said. Gardyne put his jacket back on.

The Weather and You

I was glad to walk down to Jeff's place this morning to call on the old Wyoming cowboy and see how he was doing after his mild heart attack. He was feeling good. He said he would be back in the saddle in a few days and exercising his seven horses. His wife winked at me behind his back, as though to signal "maybe."

Jeff then reminisced about his days on the old Flying U Bar before he retired, and as usual he brought the weather into it. "One thng a cowboy knows," he said, "is that when the night sky is going to be overcast after a pretty cool day in the spring, the temperature for sleeping by the fire a day's ride from the home ranch is going to be warmer.

"A cowboy doesn't mind sleeping out in all kinds of weather in the spring and summer, if he has a little shelter, but he'd rather be in the bunkhouse on a clear night. In the spring that night will be cold and maybe frosty."
